Italy Demands League Ouster For Ethiopians

Baron Aloisi Declares Selassie's Empire Is 'Outlaw Nation.'

Kellogg Pact Held Not Applicable

African Slavery Cited as Excuse for War of Conquest.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 4.—Italy tonight gave the League of Nations its choice—expel Ethiopia or Italy. Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate to the council, asserted in a press conference after today's historic session that there is no other choice.

The dynamic, semi-bald exponent of Fascism waited until tonight to deliver another bombshell: Italy does not regard the Kellogg pact as applicable to Africa. Previously he had told the council that Italy holds the 1926 treaty with Ethiopia already violated by the East African nation.

Thus—in advance of any international move to invoke these pacts against Italian aggression against Ethiopia—Mussolini has closed the door against them. The Italian dictator in effect has established his own rules of international law in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and dared anyone to challenge them.

Calls Nation "Outlaw."

Facing an almost unitedly hostile or fearful opinion, Aloisi stood before the horseshoe-shaped council table at today's opening of debate on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and branded Ethiopia a "world outlaw."

"Italy reserves for herself complete liberty of action," he announced, "for the purpose of adopting all measures necessary for the security of her colonies and to safeguard her own interests."

Mussolini "has been forced to conclude" that the 1928 Italo-Ethiopian friendship pact no longer is binding, Aloisi continued. It has failed in practice to guarantee the peaceful existence of Italian colonies. Italy can not rely upon "purely legal guarantees" to fufill a duty or banish forever dangers menacing her colonies, Eritrea and Somaliland, adjoining Ethiopia.

The Italian delegate holds ready for exhibition eight big packing cases of evidence purportedly showing that Ethiopia is a savage, slave-trading country which needs to be led to "enlightenment" by a "civilized" power.

Refuses Discussion.

He reiterated his "final and irrevocable" statement to the council a few hours earlier: "I will remain passive during the discussion and while I am ready to discuss issues with the League, under no circumstances will I do so with Ethiopia."

Aloisi announced surprisingly that Italy is willing to consider another Franco-British compromise before she makes war. However, little importance was attached to this because the diplomat smilingly added "while Capt. Eden regarded the Paris offer as most generous we consider it decidedly contrary."

Terms of the deal offered at Paris by Capt. Anthony Eden of Britain and Premier Laval of France never have been revealed officially, although they were reported to embrace sweeping economic and political concessions in Haile Selassie's domain. Britain and France are known to believe them the utmost which can be offered, short of handing over Ethiopia lock, stock and barrel to Mussolini.

Elaborating his rejection of the Kellogg pact in the present crisis, Aloisi said Italy made the same reservations with regard to Africa that Britain did.

Aloisi's declarations only served to emphasize what was apparent to most diplomats at 2 p. m. when the council adjourned its initial effort until tomorrow—that the League is bogged down in a morass of conflicting aims, ambitions, words and procedure.

Many already are forecasting that the League not only will fail to prevent Mussolini from attacking Ethiopia but also will demonstrate forever its own impotency in the face of armed challenge.

Aloisi stood calmly at the council table and, in the presence of subdued spectators overflowing the galleries, told the representatives of other powers that Italy is going ahead in East Africa.

His words grated sharply after speeches by Eden and Laval expressing hope for peace and confidence in the future of the League.

Selassie Rebukes U. S. for Revocation of Oil Lease.

Tongue Lashing Is Given Minister

Right to Extend Grant to Any Country Is Defended.

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Sept. 4.—Emperor Haile Selassie, furious at what he considered an invasion of Ethiopian sovereignty, summoned United States Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert to the palace today and delivered a severe tongue-lashing to the U. S. State Department for causing cancellation of the Standard-Vacuum oil concessions.

Engert left the interview tight-lipped and refusing to reveal progress of the conversations. However, Ethiopian officials revealed to the United Press the nature of the Lion of Judea's roar of protest.

Haile Selassie considers that Secretary of State Hull acted with gross misjudgment in persuading the American oil company to relinquish the concessions which rocked diplomatic circles on three continents on the eve of Premier Benito Mussolini's anticipated occupation of Ethiopia.

Ethiopia wishes to extend the privilege of developing her vast natural resources to any foreigners willing to co-operate, the United States envoy was informed. Those willing to co-operate should be free from official influence by their governments, he added sharply.

Diplomatic Move Seen.

"We need the co-operation of someone instead of obstacles," officials said in paraphrasing the monarch's words to Engert.

After the shock of surprise at the United States oil concession cancellation had worn off, officials speculated whether the American move was part of a general diplomatic move including Britain and France whereby Italy might be induced to accept peaceful concessions on condition the Standard-Vacuum contract were voided.

Italian diplomats, who said a few days ago that the concession ruined all chances of peaceful solution, tonight appeared optimistic. Some quarters believed the American action was merely a part of determination to remain neutral and not allow business to compromise peaceful intentions.

An official communique denied that the Standard-Vacuum concessions negotiated by Francis W. Rickett, British promoter, were invalid due to the prior agreement with Dr. Emilio Dulio, of Italy. Dulio refused terms offered by the Ethiopian government, which informed him in July, 1932, that it was reassuming freedom of action.

Officials Downcast.

Ethiopian officials were downcast when informed this morning that the Emperor's intricate strategy, aimed at pitting American diplomatic influence against Mussolini's aggressive determination to seize the whole country, had backfired.

They derived a small measure of satisfaction from the report to the League of Nations Council of the Ualual arbitration commission, which failed to give Italy legal grounds for making war. The side-stepping report was regarded as at least a partial Ethiopian victory, even though Mussolini's conditions prohibited the arbitrators from pointing out that the border fight occurred on territory that even Italian maps show as Ethiopian.

League Bogged Down.

War preparations continued apace as end of the rainy season, September 27—generally expected to signal Italian attack—neared. There is a lively trade about the capital in second-hand bullets made from used cartridges refitted with powder and roughly cast slugs. Due to the wide variety of weapons used by Haile Selassie's warriors, some being virtual antiques, some of the bullets have to be wrapped in paper to fit the bore.

The United States is returning home three American Negroes, Fannie Eversole, of Diredawa, and Lissie Jackson and her daughter, Mildred, now at Djibouti, French seaport of Ethiopia.

Rome's Threat Causes London To Call Cabinet

Special Session Will Draft Policy on Mussolini's League Defiance.

By the United Press.

London, Sept. 4.—Britain moved to meet Premier Benito Mussolini's defiance of the League tonight by summoning her cabinet from vacation retreats to an emergency meeting in London.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin entrained at Aix-Les-Bains, France, at 9:20 p. m. for London, via Paris. Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain landed at Folkstone from Boulogne. Lord President of the Council J. Ramsay MacDonald arrived by airplane from Lossiemouth, Scotland.

Officials weer silent as to the significance of the hurried reassembling of the nation's leaders. It was believed they felt Italy's full intention in East Afgrica, as revealed today in Rome and Geneva, necessitated conferences on Britain's policy.

Important British military and naval action already has resulted from the last cabinet session. Indian troops have been started for Addis Ababa to protect the legation there. The Mediterranean fleet has left Malta and steamed to positions around the Suez Canal, to thwart Italy's route to Eritrea and Somaliland—the colonies from which she is soon to hurl armies into the Ethiopian lowlands.

Joan Blondell Granted Divorce in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Sept. 4 (AP).—Joan Blondell, blonde, wisecracking screen comedienne, was granted a divorce today from George Barnes, ace cameraman, who, she said, did nothing but read or sit with a highball in front of him when company came.

She was awarded custody of her year-old son, Norman Scott Barnes, and informed the court there was no property settlement as there had been no community property.

New Deal Tugs Purse Strings To Cut Costs Before Election

Roosevelt Puts Biggest Alphabetical Agencies Under Budget as Federal Employes Reach New Peak of 729,769.

By Felix Bruner.

With the New Deal program rapidly leaving the planning stage and entering the "management" stage, a general tightening up of organization and personnel and a corresponding cut in expenditures was being anticipated yesterday.

Various Government departments and agencies were planning their budgets for the next fiscal year, preparing for an October 15 deadline, when their estimates must be in, with the realization that they are facing a curtailment of wholesale spending.

President Roosevelt is approaching the next campaign with the certainty that expenditures will provide a vulnerable point of attack for his opponents unless he can show that really important cuts are being made.

In Hyde Park yesterday he gave a hint of his intentions when he said the peak of the national emergency has passed and that budget methods must hereafter be used by emergency agencies, as well as by regular Government departments, in regulating expenditures. He added that expense cutting must mean personnel cutting.

104,498 Clerks Here Now.

The President had before him a recent report of the Civil Service Commission showing that 12,057 employes were added to the Federal pay roll between June 30 and July 31, bringing the total to 729,769 in the Nation and 104,498 in Washington.

The President already has given several indications of his curtailment program. "Deadlines" have been set on the receipt of applications for works money and on the making of allotments. Arrangements are being made to prevent overlapping in the various Federal housing activities, through the formation of a central bureau. Nearly all the emergency offices

More Rain Due, Floods Feared In Rock Creek

Humidity Nears Saturation Point as Inch Falls in Steady Downpour.

More than an inch of rain fell in Washington yesterday and more will fall today, according to Weather Bureau reports.

In Rock Creek Park, a policeman on horseback patroled the creek banks to watch for first signs of a flood. Harbor authorities reported that the Potomac River was rising slowly, but would not reach flood stage for several days—if the rain continues.

Late yesterday, the humidity rose to within 2 points of the 100 per cent saturation point. Weather Bureau officials said the Florida hurricane and tropical storm centers were partly responsible for Washington's five-day rainy spell.

Although yesterday's humidity was high, it broke no records, meteorologists reported. Average humidity for August was 54. Moderate southeast and east winds, slightly lower temperatures and continued rain was the prediction for today.

Heavy fogs over large sections of the East disrupted flying schedules. Only a few planes, flying regular routes, left Washington yesterday.

The eastern and western shores of Maryland reported hard rains throughout the day.

George Hanson, Diplomat, Ends His Life on Ship

Brilliant U. S. Career Man Was Coming Home for Nerve Treatment.

George C. Hanson, Consul General for the United States at Salonika, Greece, and famous as the State Department's ace trouble-shooter in the Far East during his 25 years of service in the Orient, died of a self-inflicted gun wound on the high seas, Secretary Hull was informed yesterday.

The big, bald, genial diplomat, known unofficially to his friends and fellow workers as the "Mayor of Harbin," and the "Uncrowned King of Manchuria," was returning to the United States on the cruise ship President Polk, of the Dollar Line, when he ended his life.

In a laconic wireless to the State Department, officers of the vessel reported Hanson's death occurred Monday at 2:30 p. m. He was returning home for treatment of a nervous and kidney disorder in care of the ship's doctor.

Nervous Breakdown.

Hanson was assigned to his last post, in Salonika, July 9, 1935, and he assumed his duties in the Greek city on July 22. He suffered a nervous breakdown shortly after his arrival.

He went to Athens for treatment where physicians advised his return to the United States. He sailed from Salonika, on the Aegean Sea, to Marseille, where he boarded the President Polk returning from a world cruise.

The ship left Marseille August

Gale Threatens To Change Path, Hit Inland Cities

Squalls Hamper Work as First Boatload Is Taken Off Dixie.

Many Vessels Near To Grounded Craft

All Shifted Passengers to Be Transported to Miami.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Miami, Sept. 4.—Skilled seamen from a fleet of rescue ships transferred to safety the first of 384 passengers and members of the crew from the stranded liner Dixie, said radio reports late today from the scene of an epic struggle with the sea off rocky French Reef.

A wireless message to the Associated Press from the Coast Guard cutter Carrabassett, maneuvering close to the luckless Morgan Line flagship, said the first boatload of passengers off the Dixie had been taken aboard the cutter at 3 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Simultaneously, the Morgan Line offices in New York announced receipt of a somewhat garbled message from the Coast Guard that a cutter was towing seven motorboats, each with a capacity of 41 persons.

There was no word as to how many actually were in the boats.

Line officials interpreted the message, relayed to them by the New York Coast Guard base from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to mean that the cutter was towing the boats to other and larger rescue vessels hove to near the Dixie.

It was regarded as unlikely that any attempt would be made to tow the boats into Miami, 60 miles to the north.

The message received by the Associated Press said Purser V. J. Slovin of the Dixie and Father F. A. Wekeman, of San Diego, Calif., were the first of the Dixie's list to step on the deck of the cutter.

Other wireless reports indicated the United Fruit liners Atenas, Limon and San Benito were among the first to launch boats, taking advantage of a lull in the squalls that had balked rescue attempts for long hours.

Sends Terse Message.

From the Dixie herself came this terse message to her New York offices:

"Starting to transfer passengers 2 p. m."

Apparently the grounded liner was holding her own after 40 hours on the reef, for her skipper reported the water in her holds had been reduced and that she was resting easy.

Her passengers were reported cheerful and confident, although some had been bruised during the hurricane that flung the liner aground.

From the fan-like fleet of rescue craft, crisp and graphic messages began the gripping story of the rescue attempt.

Boats swung from davits into an ocean still churned by the squally aftermath of a hurricane that swept the liner on the reef at midnight Monday, and at mid-afternoon a Pan American Airways pilot who skimmed over the Dixie reported four of nine steamers were taking off passengers.

Only a few minutes earlier the master of the United Fruit liner Limon reported by Tropical Radio: "Passenger transfer commencing immediately."

As the rescue went slowly ahead, another Coast Guard cutter at the scene, the Saukee, was ordered to proceed to the aid of the Danish steamer Leise Maersk, aground 75 miles north of Key West, if she were not needed by the Dixie.

Like the Dixie, the little Danish vessel was tossed aground in Monday night's hurricane. The light-

London, Sept. 4 (AP).—Homer S. Cummings, United States attorney general, called on Scotland Yard officials today and spent two hours in various departments discussing methods used in crime detection.

Few Veterans Survive in Florida Camps of Keys Zone.

Georgia Affected As Wind Rages On

Aid Speeded to Ravaged Area; Property Loss Set at Millions.

By the United Press.

Miami, Sept. 4.—Hurricane-swept Florida counted its dead tonight from a vicious tropical storm which drowned or killed possibly 700 persons, with some relief workers fearing the toll would equal that of the disaster of 1926, when more than 2,000 persons lost their lives.

Property damage ran into the millions of dollars and the end was not in sight.

Warnings were broadcast tonight of fear the hurricane, roaring along at 85 miles an hour, would veer eastward and again cross the stricken State. The storm center was in southern Georgia and extreme northern Florida. Should it turn eastward, the north half of the State would be ravaged. Jacksonville, Fla., and Savannah, Ga., were in the probable path of the hurricane should this course be followed.

An advisory issued by the Weather Bureau at 3 p. m. said the storm likely will move north-northeastward the next few hours, with winds decreasing in intensity. However, there will be shifting gales near the center and southeast gales along the South Atlantic coast.

The hurricane, roaring northward, swept the keys at the lower tip of Florida and veered up the west Gulf coast. Two FERA camps were almost wiped out. World War veterans on relief-work projects comprised most of the dead.

Property damage was terrific and citrus and truck crops were ravaged by the tearing winds and salt water, driven up creeks and rivers and inundating large areas.

Fear for Jacksonville.

Coast Guard officers at Jacksonville warned tonight of fears the hurricane would strike back inland, crossing the State eastward toward populous, wealthy Jacksonville.

Red Cross and other mercy organizations mustered all available resources to succor stricken areas. Medicine and food and water were hurried to the devastated keys and villages, as were doctors.

A special train sent to rescue war veterans working on highway projects in the keys was overturned by waves, but none was drowned.

The estimate of 700 dead was made by the Miami Beach Tribune. The newspaper quoted two war veterans from the worst-hit area that 505 men had been killed at Matecumbe. Jack Coombs, Miami undertaker, sent to the camp to preserve bodies, reported between 400 and 500 men dead at the camp.

Coombs said that if casualties on other keys were proportionately as high, the disaster might match the 1926 hurricane.

Walls of water as high as 15 feet swept some of the low keys at the

Between You and Me

Irreverent American Press Irks Old World; the Real Story of Hanson's Death.

By Raymond Clapper

IT is getting to be impossible for an American publication to be sold abroad unless some of its irreverent pages have been torn out. Japan not only ripped out the cartoons of the Japanese Emperor from Vanity Fair but called its ambassador back from his vacation to protest to the State Department.

Even tolerant old Britain, willing enough to permit the regular Sunday afternoon nose-thumbing in Hyde Park, has been tearing saucy pages out of Time Magazine recently.

If such a rule were to be applied in the United States, it would be impossible for any American newspaper or magazine reader to obtain a complete copy of any publication. Even here there was some flirtation in Congress recently for a disguised censorship bill, which under the professed object of suppressing radical propaganda, would have opened the path for thin-skinned officials to crack down on publications with which they might happen to be displeased. In Alabama the State Legislature passed a drastic antiradical press law. One courageous young editor of a highly reputable newspaper promptly printed an editorial advocating forcible overthrow of the Government just to see what would happen. Something did happen the next day. The State Legislature repealed the law.

* * *

We are entering a presidential campaign season and the going will be rough on every candidate for public office. All of them will be ridiculed, denounced, exposed as frauds, double-crossers, fakers, glib promisers, feeble-minded and crazy. And nobody will take it very seriously, least of all the victims. It just goes with politics in America.

It has always been so and most people hope it will always be so. In his diaries, now being published in Cosmopolitan Magazine, Mark Twain wrote years ago:

"By the absence of an irreverent press, Europe for a thousand years has existed merely for the advantage of half a dozen seventh-rate families called monarchs, and some hundreds of riff-raff sarcastically called nobles. Our papers have one peculiarity—it exists nowhere else—their irreverence. May they never lose and never modify it."

* * *

There is an old folk tale about the mighty absolue monarch who commanded unquestioning obedience from his vast army. But he was undone finally by the small torture of a gnat.

In America we go on the theory that if a public man is not able to survive the small tortures of political critics, he is not hardy enough for the job and had best drop out.

What if criticism is petty, unfair, distorted, based on misrepresentation? Americans are shrewd enough in the long run to detect that. It is the sound criticism, that which ferrets out the real weaknesses and faults, that is enduring.

So we have found that, while temporary injustice may be done, eventually the chaff blows away and the sound criticism survives. Just now the estimate of William J. Bryan, as the Secretary of State during the early years of the European War, is being revised in his favor. His views while he was in office ran so counter to the mass of propaganda which was seeking to draw the United States into the war that he was put down for a large booby. Now, as the history of the period is gone over more objectively, it is Col. House who is showing up as the easy mark and Bryan's judgment is being viewed with greater respect.

* * *

Nothing that will be said of Roosevelt in the coming year can exceed in fury the things that were said of George Washington, whose retirement from the Presidency was hailed as a day of jubilee. In the Virginia Legislature, John Marshall tried to get a resolution adopted declaring Virginia's appreciation of its great son's services to his country. A cold resolution, expressing the most meager appreciation was drafted. Marshall tried to warm it up by inserting reference to Washington's "wisdom." He was voted down. Washington, writing to Jefferson, said he would never have believed that "every act of my Administration would be tortured and the grossest and most insidious misrepresentations of them be made . . . and that, too, in such exaggerated and indecent terms as could scarcely be applied to a Nero—a notorious defaulter—or even to a common pickpocket."

But, as Calvin Coolidge once said about the slanders on Washington as he looked out of the south window of the White House toward the tall obelisk: "I see the Monument is still there."

* * *

There is a heart-breaking story behind the suicide of George Hanson, the famous consular officer of the State Department, who shot himself on his way home from a recent assignment to Salonika.

Though long in the State Department foreign service, Hanson was not a cookie-pusher. He always had contempt for the gigilo diplomat. He was a lusty, rough and hearty top sergeant of diplomacy. While on foreign service, he kept his consulate doors open for Americans in trouble. Abroad most of his life he remained a Connecticut Yankee and never became infected with the expatriotism which infects so many career diplomats.

* * *

So in the course of time it was natural that such a rugged and open-handed diplomat would say something undiplomatic. He did—at a private luncheon in New York some months ago. Having just returned from Moscow, Hanson, off the record, talked to his audience in a vein not unlike that which Secretary Hull has been speaking to Soviet officials recently. When the parlor diplomats heard about it they were horrified. Hanson had been indiscreet. He must be punished.

Will Rogers and Karl Bickel, then president of the United Press, went to the State Department to protest. Both had seen how efficient Hanson was in Manchuria a few years before. Both had traveled all over the world and had known how rare a practical, working diplomat was. But the order was that Hanson must be disciplined for his indiscretion.

State Department officials looked over the map for the worst assignment they could find. They couldn't exile him to Siberia because that was where Hanson had recently made an outstanding reputation as a real diplomat. Ahal Ethiopia! George was ordered to Addis Abbaba.

* * *

But just after that Mussolini began to prepare for war and the newspapers—reporters all liked George because they knew there was nothing phoney about him—all reported that Hanson was being sent to the most important trouble spot to look after American interests. Then the State Department decided this was too good a break, so orders were changed. While Hanson was en route to his post he was switched to Salonika, Greece, an obscure little spot, for punishment.

The State Department, in its official statement of regret over Hanson's death, said he was coming home because of ill-health. They said it was sugar in the blood. That wasn't it, really. George had a big heart. It had been broken.

President Roosevelt told an audience of Hyde Park neighbors that the wiring in the White House was out of date and that he had to move out while it was being rewired. That's right. It is being wired for sound.

house tender Ivy, en route to Matecumbe kgeys with supplies and water for hurricane victims, also was directed to help the Leise Maersk if necessary.

Operations Under Way.

Alon the line of rescue craft other steamers swung into action. As the Limon prepared to launch four boats, each capable of holding 150 persons, two other United Fruit boats began operations.

The S. S. Atenas wirelessed she "will stand by the Dixie" and that the San Beito, like the Limon, was "preparing to launch lifeboats immediately."

Rouh seas were hampering the rescue efforts, Pilot Roy Keeler, pilot of the American Airways Amphibian, reported.

However, the Atena's skipper radioed that Capt. E. W. Sundstrom of the Dixie "wants us to send motorboat and lifeboats" and that "sea is moderating."

All day the anxious rescuers had waited, only to held from attempting the rescue by intermittent squalls that lashed the sea, infested by sharks and barracuda.

Davits swung outward on these vessels and eager seamen were waiting at their stations when the word came to launch their boats and pull away for the Dixie, leaking and listing on the reef for 40 hours.

Aboard the Dixie the 253 passengers and 131 members of the liner's crew awaited with apparent confidence and calm.

The captain reported the water in two of the Dixie's holds had been pumped down from 10 to 8 feet despite the pounding of the breakers.

Messages from the rescue craft held high hope for a safe removal of the passengers, but expressed the opinion expert handling of life boats would be required to prevent anyone's going overboard.

More Ships Arrive.

Hour by hour the converging cirele of rescue craft was increased by new arrivals and by mid-afternoon so many ships were hovering by that one United Friut liner, the Platano, continued her voyage.

The Atenas replaced her on orders from the owners in New York.

The Platano said the Atenas, with better accommodations for the care of distressed passengers, would stand by in place of the Platano, which was released by the Dixie's master because of her perishable banana cargo and the number of other rescue craft at hand.

Capt. C. D. McRae, of the Platano, ordered "full steam ahead" for New York.

Also spread about the Dixie were the tankers Reaper and Watertown, the fruit boat Gatun, the Morgan liners El Occidente and El Mundo, two Coast Guard cutters and an increasing number of other craft.

From an airplane that skimmed low over the grounded cruise ship, the Dixie looked shipshape except for a slight list to starboard.

"The passengers seem cheerful and unworried," an Associated Press reporter in the plane said. "Most of them are dressed in their sports clothes. Lining the rails, they cheered and waved as we circled about them."

The rescue craft were notified by the Dixie's veteran skipper to land all passengers they take off at Miami.

"To Hell With Expense."

"To hell with the expense," was the word that came from S. I. Cooper, manager of the Morgan Line in New York, in urging that no means be spared to rescue the passengers.

He said a skeleton crew would be kept aboard after the passengers and most of the crew had been taken off.

Crisp radio messages described the progress of the dramatic rescue attempt.

One received by United Fruit Lines in New York from Tropical Radio, reported: "Understand Dixie started transfer of passengers at 2 p. m. Do not know to which rescue ship."

It was estimated the trip from the scene of the rescue to Miami would take the rescue craft approximately four hours.

At 4:08 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Tropical Radio reported that the San Benito had lifeboat No. 4 alongside the Dixie and that boat No. 3 was on her way to the grounded liner.

Hurricane Toll Now 700; Inland Havoc Feared

Florida Cites Threatened by Shift in Course of 85-Mile Gale.

height of the storm. Many communities on the keys have not been heard from since the storm began.

St. Petersburg apparently had escaped with minor damage in comparison with the heavy loss to property reported at Tampa and Sarasota. Damage on the West Coast, however, did not compare with that inflicted in the southern end of the State.

Tampa Hard Hit.

Tampa estimated a damage of $1,000,000 as the back-wash from waters also added to the loss. The storm passed the Tampa sector about 2 a. m. Communication lines to Clearwater, west of Tampa, were out most of the day.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 4 (AP).—A howling tropical hurricane that lashed the Florida Keys, leaving an estimated 250 to 500 dead, scores injured and heavy property damage in its wake, tonight recurved and threatened to strike again with renewed fury on the west coast of the peninsula north of St. Petersburg.

Scores of persons evacuated the little sponge fishing town of Cedar Key as the Weather Bureau predicted the storm, which had passed out over the Gulf, had turned and likely would hit the coast again and head notheastward up the State.

Most of the buildings in Cedar Key are of flimsy construction, and utmost precautions were taken. Schools and other more substantial buildings were thrown open as shelter. The key on which the village is located is connected with the mainland only by a narrow causeway.

While keeping close watch on the progress of the disturbance, Red Cross officials estimated that at least 200 World War veterans, located in FERA camps in the Florida Keys, had perished when the storm struck that area.

Leonard K. Thompson, Red Cross disaster chairman at Miami, telephoned relief headquarters at Washington that bodies of 100 of the veterans had been recovered by rescue workers who had pushed over flooded highways south as far as lower Matecumbe Key.

Fear Large Toll.

They still have been unable to reach two other veterans' camps farther south, but Thompson said he assumed the same death ratio would hold. The veterans were engaged in building an over-seas highway to link Key West with the Florida mainland.

Meantime, a report was made to the Florida East Coast Railway by its station master at Islamorado, George Branch, that he had counted nearly 150 bodies. He estimated several hundred died in the storm.

President Roosevelt personally ordered all available Federal forces to render aid and Coast Guard ships were dispatched to act as hospital bases in the isolated keys.

Confronting the rescue workers was the gruesome task of removing to Miami the bodies of all those who perished on the keys, some of which are reachable now only by boat, since highways and railroad beds were washed out.

Some rescuers reported bodies could be seen pinned under the wreckage of their homes and others were strewn out about in the open. Belief was expressed that some of the bodies may have been washed out to sea by the high tidal wave that struck the keys.

Scenes of death, misery and destruction greeted the eyes of those who journeyed today to the rugged keys to lend a helping hand to the hurricane victims.

Houses and other buildings were crushed like matchwood and strewn about the countryside by the wind's fury. Highways were flooded and bridges and railroad tracks were washed away, completely isolating many of the keys.

Seas Still Pound.

To some of the islands, boats were the only means of communication, and the going was rough and hazardous. Heavy seas still were pounding and the weather was damp and dismal.

Rescue workers expressed belief the heaviest loss of life probably was on Matecumbe keys and fishing villages on Plantation Key and Key Largo, which have not been reached yet.

Dr. Joe Stewart, who flew in a Pan-American survey plane over the storm-ridden Keys late today, reported by wireless that all but 11 persons at Veterans' Camp No. 5 had perished.

FERA headquarters previously had stated 192 veterans had been stationed at that camp but that it was possible a number of them were away on leave of absence.

Camp No. 5 and Camp No. 3, located farther south on lower Matecumbe Key, have not been reached by foot by rescuers, who have been halted by washouts south of Camp No. 1, to the north.

The FERA had estimated that 250 veterans were originally located at Camp No. 1; 192 at Camp No. 5, and 241 at Camp No. 3.

"Survivors of Camp 5 numbering 11 are at Camp 3. All others perished. At Camp 3 are 45 known dead, 25 wounded and 75 refugees. Plenty of food and water. Coast Guard cutter just arrived."

Pilot Roy Keeler, flying the survey plane, also reported to Pan-American:

"Conditions on Keys from Tavernier to Matecumbe most serious. Many dead laid out. Great many people walking around without any shelter at present. Waiting for Red Cross party to return medicine to lower Matecumbe."

That message was timed at 12:40 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Stories of Horror.

Heartrending tales of horror and suffering were brought out of the wind-whacked Keys today by survivors. Typical of them was that told by Dr. Lasser Alexander, medical examiner at one of the veterans' camps on Matecumbe Key.

"I was at Snake Creek Hotel, which was used as a hospital. This collapsed about 10 p. m., with many persons under the ruins. There were about 40 patients in this building, about half of them women and children. Out of this number, there were only seven men and three or four of the women saved.

"When the building toppled over, I was able to walk out through a hole in the wall into about three or four feet of water filled with floating timbers and debris. The wind was about 50 or 60 miles an hour and carried flying timbers that caused most of the casualties."

Joseph Factsau, timekeeper at Camp No. 3, was the only known person to have escaped alive from that camp. He was taken to a Miami hospital for treatment to an injured spine, and told a graphic story of how he saw his wife, two daughters and two grandchildren perish in the storm.

"The building we were placed in lasted only an hour," said Factsau, a former Army aviator. "I tried to make a human chain from the building to the railroad track to get all the women and children to safety, but I was washed into the Gulf by a high wave. I swam back as quickly as I could and reached shore just as the hospital (the Snake Creek Hotel) collapsed. I heard my wife calling my name, but I was not able to get to her in time. They were all killed under the ruins."

One of the victims of the Snake Creek Hotel disaster was Dr. E. C. Main, medical director of the veterans' camp there.

Train Washed Out.

A special rescue train of 11 cars, sent into the keys area to evacuate the veterans and other residents there, never was able to perform its errand of mercy—it, too, fell a victim of the storm.

Swirling flood waters washed out the tracks from around it and beneath it and the coaches toppled over into the mud and water, a twisted mass of wreckage. The crew was reported safe.

William Johns, newspaperman, who was aboard the relief train, told how "a wall of water 15 or 20 feet high picked up our coaches and swirled them about like straws."

"We felt them going and I can imagine everyone thought it was the end. I know I did.

"The wall of water passed as quickly as it came, else we would all have been drowned like rats in a trap."

Many of the veterans in the camps along the keys were members of the bonus seekers who marched on Washington several years ago. They came from the four corners of the country, as did a number of the residents of the little islands, who made their living at gardening, fishing and fruit growing.

Co-operating with land rescue workers and several Coast Guard seaplanes was a fleet of flying boats offered by the Pan American Airways. They were equipped with from two to four engines, capable of carrying huge quantities of supplies and remaining aloft for long periods.

With imperative need for rushing food and medical supplies into the stricken regions, gangs of workmen were set to work immediately repairing roads and railroad tracks to permit supply trucks to penetrate the keys. The airplanes were prepared to drop food and medicine from the skies if the situation becomes more critical.

New Deal Tugs Purse Strings To Slash Costs

Big Alphabetical Agencies, AAA, PWA, NRA, Put Under Budget.

have been put under the budget, with the exception of the Works Progress Administration.

The President yesterday ordered the following, which include some of the biggest of the emergency organizations, put under the budget: Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Commodity Credit Corporation, Co-ordinator of Federal Transportation, Public Works Administration, Federal Emergency Relief Administartion, National Recovery Administration and the Tennessee Valley Authority. Other emergency organizations had been placed under the budget system in previous orders.

Relief Workers to Go.

Some of the largest cuts, probably, will come in the various relief organizations. As the works program progresses more and more States will cease to receive direct relief money, with the ultimate goal "getting out of this business of relief." This should mean a reduction in personnel.

Even more effective is expected to be the winding up of preliminary work in connection with the works program. Applications, under the President's order, must be in by next Tuesday. By September 17 all allotments must be made. This will put an end to the enormous task of receiving, inspecting and investigating applications, a task on which an army of workers is now employed. In the future the job should be merely one of supervision.

Further reduction in the number of NRA employes is expected as a result of the failure of the Walsh bill which would have required Government contractors to come under code provisions. Much of the NRA staff, which originally numbered 4,500 in Washington, had been held intact because it was expected to be needed in connection with enforcement of this bill. NRA is now definitely only a research organization and will continue as such unless Congress passes new NRA legislation at the next session. In the closing days of the last session President Roosevelt asked committees to study such legislation.

Growth Halted Temporarily.

On the other hand, new legislation will add to personnel in some instances—when money can be found to meet pay rolls. With the death of the third deficiency appropriation bill formation of large new organizations was halted temporarily. The biggest of these is expected to be the division which will administer the social security act. The new labor board and the Guffey coal board also will require some additional personnel, but these groups are not expected to be large. The labor board, for the most part, will operate with employes who worked for the old labor board. FACA employes are expected to be utilized in enforcement of the new alcohol control law.

The new orders mean that various agencies will have to secure in advance a monthly budget approval for all overhead commitments. This will not apply to relief payments, wokrs relief disbursements, Public Works allotments and farm benefit payments.

Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee planned to meet December 1, a month before Congress opens, for consideration of next year's budget.

Budget Cut Ordered.

Orders already have gone to the Budget Bureau to trim estimates and the committee will scan these figures for the possibility of further reductions. The committee is expected to look into necessity for the number of new employes who have been added to the pay roll.

With the deadline on work relief applicatoins approaching, the control division was handling applications at the rate of $100,000,000 a day. It is expected that 4,000 applications will be handled daily between now and the deadline.

An allotment board meeting, scheduled for yesterday, was postponed because of the death of Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, but a meeting may be held within the next few days. It was predicted that it will take the board an entire day to go over applications ready for its consideration.

The NRA is continuing its study of industry with special attention to lumber, paper, tobacco and iron and steel. Other studies of numerous industries are being projected. It is expected that information thus obtained will be used in connection with consideration of proposed new NRA legislation.

George Hanson, Diplomat, Ends His Life on Ship

One of the most outstanding career diplomats in the service, Hanson spent a quarter of a century in China and Manchuria.

Born in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1883, and educated at Cornell University, where he was graduated in 1908, Hanson was sent to China as a student interpreter in 1909.

He held posts at Chefoo, Dalny, Newchang, Chunking and Foochow. Then he went to Manchuria, December 27, 1921, where he served for 13 years until he was transferred to Moscow as first secretary and counsul general of the embassy there.

In February of this year Hanson was assigned to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

He packed his bags and took his hunting guns along, boasting that he would "bag an elephant" while on duty at the then-quiet post.

Disappointed at Shift.

It was while Hanson was en route to Africa that war clouds gathered in Ethiopia an immediately newspapers saw the State Department's move in sending him to the storm center was that his function was to be that of the "trouble shooter" again.

But the State Department shifted him to Salonika, and he never filled the Addis Ababa assignment. This, the State Department said unofficially yesterday, was because Hanson was an expert in Far Eastern affairs, but had had little experience in the affairs of the Near East.

Instead, Cornelius H. Van Engert, consul at Cairo, Egypt, widely experienced in the diplomatic chess games of the Near East, was sent to Ethiopia.

Hanson's disappointment at not being in a center of trouble again may have brought about his illness and subsequent breakdown, friends said last night.

HELL BENT . . . for Election

• ROOSEVELT'S New Deal, during those turbulent days in March, '33, had no greater supporter than James P. Warburg, prominent economist and one of Mr. Roosevelt's first economic advisers. Mr. Warburg has long been . . . and still is . . . a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt.

• YET TODAY, as the 1936 political campaigns begin, Mr. Warburg feels it his duty, as an American citizen and a believer in American principles, to speak out against the New Deal. He speaks as one who had but little sympathy for the Hoover administration . . . as one who formerly had high hopes of what Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Administration might bring to a distressed country . . . but who now feels not only disillusioned but convinced that Roosevelt is doing more harm than good.

• MR. WARBURG has written a series of articles frankly criticizing the New Deal. Fearful of the future, this noted economist carefully examines the entire structure of Rooseveltian politics. His findings are shocking . . . provocative . . . brutally honest. These articles do not necessarily reflect the editorial policy of The Washington Post. But they will be widely discussed during the months to come, and, no matter what are your own politcial theories or beliefs, they are required reading. Under the title, "Hell Bent for Election," they will be published daily, starting

On the Air Today

The parade of new entertainment for fall and winter requires attention again today. First, word has trickled throuh on the nature of Phil Baker's new show. Baker this fall will sell gasoline and oil and in character with his new sponsor he will portray the "great American tourist." The series will appeal to anyone who has ever studied a road map and viewed nature's wonders through a windshield. It is booked for C. B. S. (which should include WJSV) beginning September 29.

• • • •

Jessica Dragonette has been announced as the guest star for the premiere of the Atwater Kent concert series which opens September 19 on a C. B. S. net. Still another C. B. S. premier is scheduled for September 15 when Ed East and Ralph Dumke, "Sisters of the Skillet," begin another series of farcical solutions of household problems.

• • • •

Still other premieres on the horizon are the return of the Chesterfield series presenting Lily Pons and Nino Martini, of the Metropolitan Opera and a popular concert orchestra and vocal ensemble under the direction of Andre Kostelanetz. David Ross also has been engaged exclusively for the series. Second, "Freddie Rich's Penthouse Party," with Rich and the blond Benay Venuta, begins a Sunday evening series, WJSV, next Sunday with informality the keynote.

• • • •

NBC provides a new feature in today's grist. Opening exercises of the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in New Orleans will be aired September 16 and the American Legion convention in St. Louis, September 23 to 26 will follow. Among those to be heard in the convention broadcasts will be Gov. Allen, of Louisiana, and Mayor Walmsley, of New Orleans; Senator Gerald P. Nye, Mme Schumann-Heink, and Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson.

• • • •

It's the "parade of the maestros" at WJSV tonight at 7. In one program of one hour duration a 40-piece orchestra will be directed by a young fortune in orchestral leadership. The line-up includes Ferde Grofe, Jacques Renard, Leonard Joy, Lud Gluskin and Red Nichols. Grofe will conduct in two of his outstanding works—"On the Trail," from the Grand Canyon Suite, and "Mardi Gras," from the Mississippi Suite. Other numbers selected by each maestro will reflect his individual style.

• • • •

Horace and Polly Hunnicutt are back on the air. And that's good news to folks who like a quiet unassuming quarter hour of songs and chatter. The theme will be "College Sweethearts" based, 'tis said, on their own reminiscenses of college. They return to the air, WRC, today at 5:45 p. m., and will be heard regularly Thursdays and Sundays.

• • • •

Bill Robinson, the world-known Negro dancer; Irene Bordoni, Robert Ripley and Al Bernie will be presented in Rudy Vallee's variety show, WRC, at 7 . . . Dorothy Radde Emery, Washington composer, and Jessamine Hartman will give a two-piano recital, WRC, at 11 a. m. . . . Old and new songs by Irving Berlin will be featured in the Music Hall, WRC, at 9.

• • • •

Graham McNamee has been selected to take over the announcing assignment for the Major Bowes Amateur Hour replacing Jimmy Wallington who goes with Cantor soon. He will be heard next Sunday night . . . An all-Mozart program featuring the seldom heard "Adelaide" violin concerto will be presented by the NBC Symphony at WMAL, 9 p. m.

Light bulbs burn out but what about automobiles?
The big difference is that automobiles "peter" out. And during their years of "petering," they are a menace on the road.
According to a recent estimate of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, over 30% of the automobiles on the road today are eight years old or older. Every one of these cars is expensive to run and a menace to public safety.
Why wear yourself down—why take the risk of very death, when you can trade in for a dependable used car for a very small outlay of money?

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Morgan Baker.

RUMORS of a Senate investigation of alleged "lobbying and trouble-making" of the National Federation of Federal Employes when Congress convenes in January were current last night on Capitol Hill.

BAKER.

The threats came from several senatorial secretaries following the latest thrust at present personnel policies by Luther C. Steward, president of the federation, at the opening of the federation's convention in Yellowstone Park Monday. Mr. Steward is quoted by the Associated Press as not mentioning New Deal agencies by name, but charging the record of the agencies showed "virulent attacks on the merit system by rapacious spoilsmen" and * * * "not within the memory of anyone now living has the merit structure in the Federal service been so beset by attacks, open and covert."

These charges were met with anger and amusement yesterday by Government officials and Capitol Hill attaches. In the absence of members of Congress, their secretaries refused to be quoted, but several freely indicated a probe of the independent employe organization, headed by Mr. Steward, could be expected in January.

The only member of the Civil Service Commission available for a statement, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, was quick to deny that the merit system has been "beset by attacks" and "rapacious spoilsmen," as charged at Yellowstone.

On the contrary, Mrs. McMillin cited figures, showing that the Civil Service has grown under the New Deal.

Figures Presented.

Commissioner McMillin said the positions brought within the classified service by the presidential order since March 4, 1933, have exceeded by more than 6,000 the number of positions withdrawn from the competitive service by the same procedure.

It was further pointed out by Commissioner McMillin that during the last fiscal year the number of positions in the competitive classified service on June 30, 1933, was 4,644 greater than the number on June 30, 1934.

"That the Congress, of course, has power," Mrs. McMillin said, "to exempt positions from the provisions of the civil service act and rules, and in the instances which this is done by granting authority to make exempt appointments, the Attorney General has held that the President may not bring such positions within the classified service by executive order.

Attack on A. F. G. E. Reported.

"The last session of Congress, however, has placed in the competitive service the majority of positions which will be required in the administration of the social security act, the railroad retirement act, the motor carrier act, and after December 27, next, the act creating the soil conservation service."

After Mr. Steward's blast at New Deal personnel policies, he is reported to have attacked the N. F. F. E.'s rival, the American Federation of Government Employes, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. He also is reported to have attacked the Sirovich bill. These attacks brought forth last night the following vigorous reply from the headquarters here of the American Federation of Government Employes:

"Luther C. Steward has taken advantage of his organization's convention to make attacks on the Sirovich bill and the American Federation of Government Employes which we can not permit to go unchallenged.

Obstructionist Tactics Charged.

"As for the Sirovich bill, it is no secret that he presented an omnibus bill to Representative Sirovich which proved so inadequate and unsatisfactory that President Babcock, of the A. F. G. E., suggested that Dr. Sirovich prepare a new bill, which he did. Thereupon, Mr. Steward and his associates followed an obstructionist policy with respect to this bill, although it covered most of the items included in his announced legislative program. Government employes who are familiar with the situation know where to place the blame for delays in bringing their hopes to realization.

"Mr. Steward said the customary harsh words to which he is addicted about our federation. We do not call names, but we would like to call attention to certain discrepancies in statements by members and officials of his organization. Consistently within the last year Mr. Steward has claimed a membership of 64,000, and two local newspapers still give that as his figure. Another quotes Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, as fixing it at 44,368, including some 4,000 members added in the last two years. Neither of these figures agrees with her financial statement as publishd locally, which gives $96,000 as the amount paid in per capita tax, presumably for two years, since the organization meets biennially.

Membership Gain Cited.

"The best possible interpretation, assuming the per capita figures are for one year and that they include no added assessments, indicates a membership of only 26,600. When Mr. Steward and Miss McNally can agree no better among themselves, one may be pardoned for taking their statements on any subject at less than face value.

"Our own federation prints its membership figures weekly. There are no discrepancies between these published statements and our claims. Incidentally, our Federation has gained 16,000 members in the last two years, against 4,000 claimed by Mr. Steward's. This growth shows that Government employes know which organization is fighting for them. Incidentally, we think it shows which group is composed of 'rumps.'

"Moreover, the American Federation of Government Employes is eager to promote Government employe legislation, no matter who sponsors it, and for that reason, President Babcock indorsed the Logan bill, sponsored by Mr. Steward's organization, and our federation supported it before a congressional committee. We did not consider it inadequate, and do not now, but we did not oppose it merely for that reason, or because it was a Steward creation."

Col. Charles I. Stengle, AFGE executive assistant, who appeared for the AFGE at the hearings on the Logan bill, pointed out further that he had shown two serious defects in the bill as it was drafted and had suggested corrections to make it workable, both of which were accepted.

Paul Best (F), FHA, and Miss Mary Lou Roper (P), NRA, are in charge of arrangements for the Young Democrats Club to attend the Friday night performance of "East Lynne" to be presented by the Willard Players in the National Press Club Auditorium.

J. L. O'C. (P), Treasury.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has been urged by H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, to adhere more strictly to the merit system in appointments to subordinate Government positions. The request was made in a letter to the President.

Mr. Kaplan assailed the alleged spoils system of appointments. He outlined all the civil service legislation enacted by the Seventy-fourth Congress and pointed out that practically all new legislation, except the Guffey coal bill, contains exemptions from civil service tests in the newly created agencies.

The league leader also attached the failure of Congress to enact legislation beneficial to the civil service program, holding that body has added little to its credit in improving or extending the merit system.

The Diary welcomes letters on Government personnel problems from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested and the writer's identity will be kept strictly confidential. Letters in no case should exceed 250 words. The writer of each letter published will receive tickets to one of Loew's theaters—the Fox, Palace or Columbia.

GLASS distinction between Government employes in regard to hours of work and leave privileges is deplored by a veteran Government Printing Office employe of more than 32 years' service.

"There always has been class distinction at Government Printing Office," writes G. P. O. veteran (F).

"You speak of the leave bills as being the most important and would benefit all who did not gain by the 40-hour bill. That means the clerks. The clerks work only 39 hours a week, so why should they be sore because several of the mechanical departments get 40 hours? The clerks have always worked seven hours a day, 30 days' leave (until the economy act cut it to 15) and 30 days' sick leave, which they still get.

"We have, until the 40-hour bill passed, worked 48 hours. Then the Saturday half-holiday cut it to 44 and now work eight hours a day, five days a week—or 40 hours. We used to get 30 days' leave and no sick leave. Now we just get 15 days' leave. Now, how do you figure the clerks ought to gain more?

"Why not put us all on 40 hours a week and give us all leave and sick leave alike?

"Don't you think one Government employe is just as good as another and should be treated the same?"

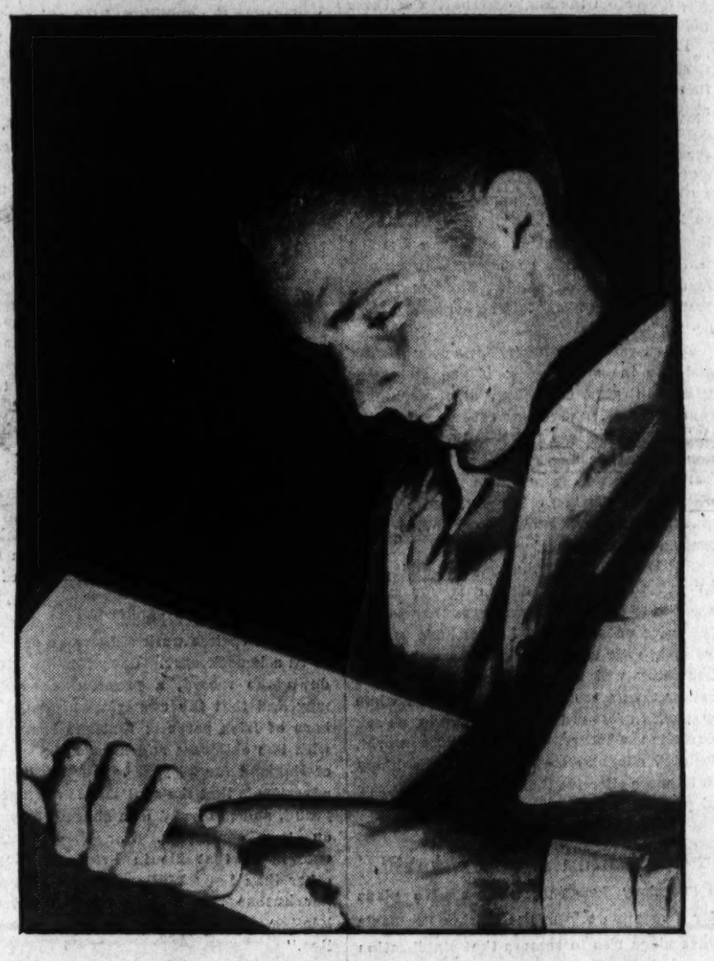
The seventh of a series concerning Post Carrier Salesmen



Post Carrier Salesman Horace Lowe, 8 Rhode Island avenue northwest

BOYS WILL BE MEN
. . . what SORT of men?

YOUNG CHAP . . . do you remember Plutarch? WELL . . . we'll tell you about him. Plutarch was a Greek philosopher. He lived over a thousand years ago. He never even dreamed of automobiles, radios, airplanes or any of the modern wonders you take for granted today. He never even dreamed of the things that were wonders in your grandfather's time . . . or in your grandfather's grandfather's. He sported a long gray beard and wore a shining white toga. And out of his mouth came words of infinite wisdom . . . wisdom as applicable to life today as it was centuries ago, when the old Greek philosopher first achieved the glory which has never dimmed.

THERE'S JUST one remark of Plutarch's we'd like to pass on to you now . . . his other writings you'll discover later in college anyway. When asked what boys should learn, Plutarch replied, "That which they shall use as men."

DO YOU REALIZE that that is just what you're doing? Carrying your Post route day in and day out . . . establishing contacts with all sorts of people and learning to talk with them on their own ground . . . selling your product to them . . . handling money, keeping your accounts straight . . . do you know that as a Post Carrier Salesman you are unwittingly, perhaps, following Plutarch's advice?

KEEP UP the good work . . . we appreciate it. It's doing us a lot of good, of course . . . but it's doing you a great deal more. It is teaching you things which will put you one step ahead of your fellows later on . . . . when you're struggling in earnest to make your place in the sun. For you are learning "that which you shall use as men."

Ruin In The Veterans' Camps.

Destruction of the veterans' camps along the southern Florida keys is only one tragic incident in the catastrophe which has swept over this region. A hurricane is no respecter of either persons or things. It is just as likely to smear ruin over the homes of hard-working citizens as over institutions of questionable social value. Yet this dramatic liquidation of the veterans' camps along the Florida keys serves to point a moral that officials in Washington have too casually ignored.

The veterans' camps in both Florida and South Carolina are havens of rest designed to keep "bonus marchers" away from Washington. Officials feared that the more persistent agitators among the "bonus marchers" would cause trouble as they did in 1932. So they were shipped off to the Sunny South to live at the expense of taxpayers. At frequent intervals some of these men use their pay (reported to be $30 to $45 per month, in addition to disability allowances drawn by most of the men) to return to Washington, whence they are again sent to the camps, again at Government expense.

Most of these veterans are drifters, psychopathic cases or habitual trouble makers. Police in the towns neighboring the camps are inclined to class them all as "hell raisers." Liquor shops near the camps flourish. Ostensibly the purpose of the undertaking is rehabilitation, but reports indicate that the actual effect is often further demoralization. Theoretically, too, the able-bodied are supposed to work, but few emphasize the utility of the work accomplished.

Any careful study of the problem would indicate the undesirability of assembling large groups of disgruntled bonus seekers in special camps where they can live in comparative ease and comfort at the expense of taxpayers. Several attempts on the part of the FERA to modify the policy suggests official dissatisfaction with its results. Yet the camps have been continued, for they provide temporary abatement of a problem which threatened to embarrass the Administration.

It is a pity that a tragedy was required to center attention upon these camps. Before they become an even greater tragedy, however, remedial measures ought to be taken. Veterans who are mentally unbalanced as well as those otherwise incapacitated, ought to be sent to hospitals where they can be properly treated. Those who are not physically or mentally handicapped have no claim whatsoever to special rewards in return for bonus agitation.

Bullets On Wheels.

Not many years ago 30 miles per hour over a highway was regarded as an astonishing speed. Sir Malcolm Campbell has multiplied that figure by 10 in his dash over the salt flats adjacent to Great Salt Lake. His projectile on wheels averaged a speed of over 301 miles per hour for a measured mile.

Through this daring exploit Sir Malcolm has attained more than one unique distinction. He is the only man who has ever traveled on land at such terrific speed or anything approaching it. What may be still more significant, however, he is the only living automobile racer who has shot across the sand at more than 200 miles per hour. H. O. D. Segrave and Ray Keech passed the 200 mark, but both are in their graves. Only a miracle saved Sir Malcolm from joining them in death when a front tire on his 2,500-horsepower machine blew out just after he had crossed the finish line traveling at 440 feet a second.

Sir Malcolm's feat was one of skill and daring for their own sake. It can scarcely be related to the science of building commercial automobiles; for his "Ol' Lady" is a bullet on wheels rather than a vehicle for passengers. Instead of being steered over highways to such speeds, it must be aimed at a mark across an absolutely level plain. Moreover, the commercial automobile has already attained such terrific power and speed that to equip it with further potential acceleration seems criminal. What motor vehicles need is not more propulsion but better human control.

Coming so soon after the mania for speed has cost the life of a Cabinet member's wife in this country, and possibly contributed to the death of the Queen of the Belgians, this new record is not without its ironical aspects. That the speed king lives while others less defiant of the laws of motion perish is a tribute to his abilities and good luck. Every competent driver will realize, however, that even a helmsman with the steel nerves of this British sportsman shakes dice with death when he undertakes to skim over the earth at 300 miles per hour. Indeed, thousands of lives would be spared each year if people fully realized the risks involved in traveling even one-sixth that speed.

Is Your Car In Neutral?

When you get into your car to drive downtown this morning it would be appropriate to reflect for a moment on the subject of neutrality.

For, in the last analysis, it is because you—among millions of other Americans—have become dependent on the automobile that the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co. negotiated the Ethiopian concession against which a blast of overly self-righteous indignation has been launched.

Viewed on its intrinsic content, there was nothing at all nefarious about this concession. There was nothing subject to reasonable criticism in the statement of the head of this Standard Oil subsidiary that "this matter was handled in the regular course of business as a private transaction with Ethiopia." Certainly there was nothing in this statement to which you, as the owner of an automobile, can properly take exception. For it was to satisfy your insistent demands that this concession was made. Without the American automobile the Standard-Vacuum Co. could not even exist, much less sponsor business deals in Ethiopia.

And the same applies not only to this particular concession but to dozens of others—in Liberia, in Brazil, in Venezuela, in the East Indies. All these have been promoted largely to further your desire, Mr. Automobile Owner, for a home in the suburbs, a cottage on the bay, or an evening's outing in the car. Why not, as you step on the starter, be honest enough to put the blame where it belongs? Is not your collective demand for cheap and pleasurable transportation the final explanation of these politically entangling concessions?

It was eminently desirable for the Department of State to ask the cancellation of this particular concession. And the Standard-Vacuum Co. was wise to agree to this request without demur. The potentialities for immediate trouble in Ethiopia are such as to make the undesirability of such a commitment, at this time, apparent to all. But as long as you, Mr. Motorist, want rubber tires on which to ride, and cheap gas for motive power, such concessions in distant lands must be expected. Fundamentally, then, who is to blame? The concessionaire, or you?

If you will permanently lock your garage and use the street cars; if you and your wife will give up coffee, silk stockings, canned foods, and every other commodity which binds us into the picture of international life, then we can be sure of our neutrality; then we can afford to be censorious when some business interest, more alert than scrupulous, seeks to provide the foreign products we insist upon.

But let us have the honesty to admit that as yet the average citizen is far more anxious to claim the advantages than to pay the price of isolation. Let us have the intelligence to realize that while this is so neutrality will remain a difficult objective rather than a secure attainment. And while we seek to forward that objective let us ask ourselves whether, in the modern world, isolated effort to keep out of war is likely to be more effective than collective endeavor to prevent it.

Stabilization Rumors Again.

Secretary Morgenthau's tentative plans for a vacation trip to the Iberian Peninsula have given rise to rumors that stabilization conversations with European financial leaders are in prospect. It seems a case of the wish being father to the thought, since the Secretary of the Treasury could make the necessary contacts much more easily by remaining at home or by going directly to Paris or London. If secret preliminary conferences are desired, it might, of course, be possible to find some obscure corner of Spain or Portugal suited for the purpose, although the reason for such a devious proceeding is not apparent.

Leaving such speculations aside, however, it is significant to find rumors of impending stabilization plans cropping up with the slightest encouragement. At present the troubled political outlook in Europe and the threatened clash between Italy and Ethiopia tend to distract attention from currency problems. However, the arguments in favor of speedy action are as cogent now as formerly from the viewpoint of the United States, Great Britain and the remaining continental gold-bloc countries. Indeed, the valiant efforts that the Dutch, Swiss and French have made to maintain the gold parities of their currencies in recent months have emphasized the need for prompt action to forestall future crises which may not be met so successfully.

While the possibility of a general election in the fall is said to preclude positive commitments on the part of Great Britain, assuming willingness to stabilize the pound, it is certainly not too soon to enter into preliminary conversations with that end in view. There never will be a time when plausible excuses for delay will be lacking. But the hindrances to orderly international trade resulting from currency instability are a compelling argument in favor of immediate action which should outweigh other considerations.

Thoughtful men everywhere fully realize the advantages to be derived from putting an end to the present unsatisfactory state of affairs even at the sacrifice of certain strategic advantages that in the long run are likely to prove illusory. That is why stabilization rumors are such hardy perennials, impervious to the chill blasts of skepticism.

The Cost Of Repairs.

Considering the great volume of idle funds awaiting investment, the comparative ease and rapidity with which the Treasury has placed $500,000,000 of notes offered for cash subscription is not in the least surprising. The anxiety aroused by the lavish scale of the Government's spending program will not be dispelled, however, by this demonstration of ability to borrow at exceptionally low rates of interest.

Although $500,000,000 would once have been considered a gigantic sum, it is a mere bagatelle compared with the amounts required to maintain the present scale of expenditures. It is not even sufficient to cover the deficit of the first two months of the current fiscal year, which reached approximately $663,000,000.

Such essential comparisons are especially disheartening in view of the fact that the budgetary deficit is much higher than for the corresponding period last year, despite the current increase in revenue. Even if the new revenue measure should yield as much as $250,000,000 per annum—the maximum predicted—and even if other tax receipts continued to rise, the spending program of the Federal Government will necessitate borrowing several additional billions during the present fiscal year.

In an informal address to neighbors at Hyde Park President Roosevelt used his rather shopworn analogy between the work of renovating and repairing the White House and the policies of his Administration. Assurances regarding the artistry of his political technique, however, do not eradicate the misgivings aroused by the excessively high cost of those recovery and relief outlays which the President chooses to regard as simple structural repairs. Even if the Administration is pledged to preserve the fine simplicity of Colonial design, in architecture and government, deficit financing, too long continued, will irrevocably undermine the stability of the old manse.

What the country wants is positive proof that retrenchment has begun—not mere assertions that it is in prospect. That is the only sure way to maintain the confidence of investors in the Government's credit, and thus avert a major catastrophe. The current move to place the administrative expenses of all emergency agencies under Budget Bureau accounting is a gesture, but not much more than a gesture, in the direction of safety.

The fact that uncovered expenditures are being currently financed without difficulty is no guarantee for the future. On the contrary, if the public should ever become convinced that the Administration is either unwilling or unable to fulfill its pledges to restore budgetary balance, investment support will be withdrawn and national bankruptcy will rapidly become inevitable.

A Lady's Lady.

At an employment office in Brighton, sometimes called the British Atlantic City, there is now on file the application of one Mrs. Watson.

It states, conventionally enough, that the applicant desires work either as a secretary or as a housekeeper. Upon reading further down the record, a prospective employer may find that the unemployed woman was born of Irish parents; that she is a widow with two children; and has been a resident of England for 26 years. What it will not advertise is that the applicant is courageous, proud, and possessed of a charm recognized on two continents. For Mrs. Watson, entered in that file in Brighton, is none other than Lady William Watson. It is of her husband, just three weeks dead, that Kipling once said "He never wrote a bad line."

Lady Watson, contrary to a popular theme of English novelists, is not going into service for a lark or in order to see how the other half lives. The comic opera, "Naughty Marietta," and books such as "The Man on the Box" and "The Admirable Crichton" have served as amusing fantasies of what happens when servants change places with their employers. But there is nothing comic in the fact that the widow of one of the greatest Victorian poets is forced by poverty to seek work as a housekeeper.

The pathos in Lady Watson's plight is not that she and her daughters find themselves compelled to work. The pity of it is akin to the sentiment of John Drinkwater, who was indignant that a poet of Watson's great gifts, "so honorably used," should have found so little appreciation that he had to leave his family penniless.

But there is also a lighter side. And that is the provocative conjecture of the effect on a household employing a titled housekeeper. Even at the risk of incurring another flood of Crichton plots, we recommend this situation to any alert author.

Russia And The New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Outstanding among the blunders committed by this Administration was the recognition of Soviet Russia; and inevitably it is beginning to perceive its error in permitting this wolf, in the sheep's clothing of friendly international trade, to stalk into our domestic fold unmolested.

That we should find ourselves in consequence in our present dilemma is in no sense surprising. It could not have resulted in any other way. While ostensibly we recognize Russia as a nation, nevertheless we did not deal with Russia as a nation. Instead we dealt with the chosen representative of that relatively small group which is now in control.

It is not strange that communistic activity should have increased tremendously in this country since our recognition. This made it much less difficult for the agents of the U .S. S. R., or probably more properly the Commintern, to carry on their business of spreading that disease—Communism—throughout our Nation. The incredible thing is that the Administration could have been so gullible as to fall for the promises of oily-tongue Maxim Litvinoff, the representative of that group comprising the core and essence of communistic activities throughout the world today, the members of which, upon admission, dedicate their lives to the spread of communism at all times and by any and all means at their command. It is not outside the realms of imagination to believe that Mr. Litvinoff was instructed to obtain recognition no matter how—the main idea was to obtain it.

The promised Russian trade with this country in return for recognition was much ballyhooed by newspapers the Nation over. Mr. Litvinoff was a good press agent. Thirty million dollars annually! Obviously, the U. S. S. R. got a bargain. Two 10-cent stores in cities as large as New York or Chicago will do that much business in a year. It is not surprising the New Deal and its disciples are popular with Stalin and his crowd.

Communism is a disease, and like a disease it should be isolated—especially, as in times like these, it is highly contagious. The course the Administration should pursue seems clear; it should reverse its decision to recognize the U. S. S. R. in any manner whatsoever before it is too late. E. N. BLYE.

Links With The Past.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of the Post-Impressionist's very interesting column on "Links With the Past," I quote a paragraph taken from your paper when, some years ago, the present Duc de Richelieu (I think it was) married the daughter of Mr. Ross Winans, of Baltimore.

"The famous Marechal de Richelieu married, when 88, a girl of 18. She lived to be 90. In 1855, dining at the Tuilleries with Napoleon III, the Duchess startled the Emperor by referring to something which, as she put it, 'my late husband one day said to Louis XIV.' Louis XIV died in 1715, so there was a stretch of 140 years bridged in one marriage."

The readers of The Post owe a vast debt of thanks to the Post-Impressionist for his delightful columns. L. A. W.

Speed Grade-Crossing Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your editorial, "How About Grade Crossings?" It appears to me that the guarding of our youth is a responsibility which should not be neglected. Fourteen school children were killed at a grade crossing at Rockville, and only a few days ago, four children were killed at a grade crossing in Washington County, making 18 young people killed from one community in less than four months because of unprotected railroad crossings.

The blame for this last fatal auto crash was put on the driver, a young man 18 years of age, although it was shown there was no protection whatever at the crossing and no lights or warning that the crossing was blocked by a passing train. In fact, there are practically no lights at grade crossings in Maryland, and the approach of these crossings is of such a nature that there is no view of the railroad.

I am in sympathy with President Roosevelt and his policies, but it seems to me it is time that something he done toward the elimination or proper protection of grade crossings. We hear of billions of dollars being provided by the Government toward the cause of humanity and not one dollar being spent to provide any protection. If this money has been appropriated for this purpose, why can't a start be made toward preventing these tragedies? Isn't it time to cut out the red tape and "how much money must be spent on a man on a project" and get to work and do something practical?

Taxi Driver's Stand.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a few lines to let you know that I am still operating my cab on the 20, 40, 60, 80 cent rate. I will continue to do so.

As you know, the members of the P. U. C. have refused to arrange a test case with me in the local Police Court. For some reason they seem to be afraid to submit their case to the local courts. Instead they have elected to try to intimidate cab drivers into compliance.

I refuse to be intimidated. I demand every right given to me by the Constitution. The P. U. C. order 1401 is a violation of the Constitution. I demand that the P. U. C. either rescind it or arrange a test case with me in the local law courts. I shall continue to operate on the 20, 40, 60, 80 cent rate until they do so.

Jane Addams-Anna Ickes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through a faieful coincidence two outstanding American women have been claimed by death within a twelvemonth. It is perhaps not unfitting that these two spirits, linked by a lifelong friendship, should leave their earthly temples so soon after each other.

Jane Addams and Anna Wilmarth Ickes grasped the torch that fell from the hands of the pioneer women of an earlier generation. Each in her own complementary sphere of social service and political freedom opened larger vistas for aspiring humanity. Their rare qualities of mind were best illustrated by unflinching adherence to principle.

American womanhood may well mourn and cherish the memory of these their elder sisters.

The Lethargy Of Business Leaders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my appreciation of your editorial of September 3, "The Road to Fascism." Your perspective was clear and your criticism well balanced. Nevertheless, it had a platitudinous quality that seems typical of almost all contemporary criticism.

I would like to see American journalism, keenly alive as it is to our economic and social crisis, more definitely aligned to a way and means of solving our problems. Concrete suggestions and the courage to state them are the need.

Your last paragraph was particularly pertinent, wherein you contrasted the aims of the selfish reactionary and the thoughtless radical and pleaded the cause of the defender of democratic processes. But what kind of man is that defender today?

I believe a major portion of the responsibility for our lethargy in economic and social progress falls on the shoulders of the responsible business and civic leaders who refuse to act. It is on them you should turn your guns, rather than on the masses, who always turn to the demagogue in a time of crisis, and on the politicians, who will always be politicians and nothing else.

Able critics of every shade of opinion are fairly unanimous in their agreement that the days of laissez faire are over. Too, it was satisfactorily demonstrated, I believe, that the NRA was a valiant experiment in that it proved in so many instances that men can be disinterested and can impose self-restraints for practical reasons. It is a sad commentary on the courage and resourcefulness of our responsible leaders that they should allow a Supreme Court decision to destroy such a fine achievement.

Out of the wreckage of the NRA should arise a resolution by these leaders to regain the good that was done, and, if necessary, there should be dissension in the ranks in order that the reactionaries should not gum the works. Action, and only firm action, can stave off the ascension of political policies foreign to American traditions.

Only by the use of every trick and trade of propaganda can these responsible citizens save themselves. Men have been willing to buy life insurance to insure financial security for their families. Surely by the proper use of advertising and sales promotion a reasonable social security can be sold to the American citizen, for it will only be through the co-operation of the leaders and the masses that a fair and just control will be self-imposed.

I would like to see this idea commented upon in your columns for whatever it is worth.

The Post Impressionist

"Enormous Room."

Post Office, Thursday.

WE HAVE, we are glad to say, friends in all sorts of places.

We have only one friend, we're glad to say—for his sake—at present in a CCC camp. The other day, this friend wrote us about the CCC camp he's in.

CCC camps aren't for everybody. Some people they're for, and some they're not. Some people ought to be in workshops, some in studios, some in the lap of luxury. And some in jail. Or so it seems to the finite eye. To that eye it seems there are lots of people who ought to be in insane asylums, but aren't—perhaps even one person who oughtn't to be a columnist, but is.

Anyhow, we have a friend in a CCC camp. And here's a letter from him.

* * *

Dear Post-Impressionist: I'm in a fog, mentally and physically. It is a nice, damp, enveloping fog and we are thinking of exporting some of it to London in exchange for some London fog. Maybe we could find things in a London fog. I can't find anything in this fog. Sometimes I can't even find the barracks.

The other night, I lost the barracks and fell off a mountain. For a while, I thought I was back in Washington and had merely fallen down the steps of a night club: you can imagine my disgust when I discovered that I was only about 3,600 feet out of my way and had to reclimb the mountain. It gave me a bad temper, so I was late for reveille, and they marked me AWOL and put me on the K. P.

* * *

However, what I meant to write about is the fact that I am living in E. E. Cummings' "Enormous Room"—only the hangings are not the same. Also, the food is better than Cummings got.

The spiritual value is nil. In Italy, Germany, Russia and certain sections of Mexico the spiritual value is nil, and it must be so here under the military. In a few more years, we'll be regimented, and the spiritual value will not only be nil, but gone entirely. It's a sure bet, and I could dare to make such a bet only in an Enormous Room.

* * *

When I came in, they gave me a lot of clothes that didn't fit me. Maybe they expect you to drink beer and expand your girth to meet your O. D.'s and your underwear. Or maybe everything will come out in the wash: my shirt came out of the wash with salmon buttons—and a size and half smaller. Except that I have to use a can-opener to unbutton the collar, it is now a perfect fit. I am learning. With a small amount of courage I'll survive and come to no good end . . .

* * *

The fog is still here. It has remained almost a week. There are mountains around us, and valleys with many fields of many colors. However, we know this only because of past clear days.

I think Proust commented on the memory of things gone—but it might have been Hemingway. I am in an Enormous Room, and things become chaotic or vague . . .

The library is not the worst. I found Balzac and Gorki and Burnett ("The Giant Swing"), an almost unread copy of "The Ugly Duchess" and a too much worn copy of your favorite "Bleak House." And I went down in the valley and brought back James Thurber and heavier tomes. So we'll make out somehow, in spite of the True Romances, True Stories, Horror Tales, Secret Agent 13, Film Fun and dozens of other pulps that prove why America has a crisis.

I don't read all the classics, but I like to have them in my locker to remind me of something I left behind: my identity and my life. I am in an Enormous Room.

* * *

I know all the jokes they will play on me, and what we will eat next week, and the week after next, and what my barracks comrades will talk about.

Enrollee No. 1 is saving money to go West. Enrollee No. 2 wants to join the Navy. Enrollee No. 3 hopes to become civilized when the depression is over. Enrollee No. 4 lost a bet on the fight: he should have bet on Joe Louis; he is betting on Max Bear next time. Enrollee No. 5 is learning to play bridge: maybe he will be a social lion. Enrollee No. 6 longs for the Jersey shore and home. Enrollee No. 7 is hopelessly lost.

* * *

We know, all of us, the histories of most of us; our hopes, our fears and our direction—that is, the direction we think we have. The world goes on outside, becoming known to us only by the outdated newspapers we receive. In our woodland retreat, we can only wait for whatever destiny lies far ahead. We cannot, like Walt Whitman, go singing with the wide, open road before us.

* * *

Certainly it has been ours "not to reason why"—only to accept this work given us by wiser and older heads. In this, our Enormous Room, we know only the slow days and the seasons' turn while civilized society speeds on, and we remain: the brown-hued, frozen surplus of a people.

* * *

Tomorrow, when we must take the reins to steer a blind and maddened governmental steed, do not blame our ignorance. We merely live and work here: we seldom think—in the Enormous Room.

Fair Enough

The Hustling Rich.

New York, Sept. 4.

MOST of the rich men that I have known were poor boys who had to quit school and go to work because their families needed the few dollars a week that they could bring in. My acquaintance with the rich does not include any Astors, Vanderbilts or Drexels, who are of that class known as idle rich, but is confined to that crop of millionaires who came up in the last 20 years or so. They might be called the hustling rich.

Undoubtedly there are some among them who were impervious to education and never could have been able to struggle through college even if they had been endowed. However, when a numbskull has grown rich by main strength, ruthlessness, hard work, ability and luck he likes to believe that he would have been a good student if he had had the chance, and to remark wistfully that his lack of education is the great regret of his life. This is strictly a pose, however, because in his heart he takes special pride in having succeeded in life according to the accepted standards, notwithstanding a serious handicap.

• • • •

MY list of rich men includes three or four who were young employes on low salaries when I first met them, about 20 years ago. Comparing their careers with those of certain contemporaries who did not get rich, I must acknowledge that they got theirs because they were smarter, gamer, more ambitious, abler and far more energetic. There is a strong dash of selfishness in all of them, even in those who think they are sentimental and generous, and they are willing to let another man make a dollar only if it is absolutely necessary to do so in order to make two dollars or more for themselves. Rich men are just as stingy and tricky and little in these matters as poor men.

It was amusing one day to hear a man who made many millions through stock promotions during the boom worrying out loud about his fortune under the New Deal. He had cashed in, picked up his marbles and withdrawn from the game. The losses which he had suffered amounted to millions in paper profits, but he still had millions of hard money left. Nevertheless, he was moaning with pain and seemed to be suffering from fear as much as any poor man suffering from want, idleness and the melancholy feeling that the years are slipping by.

• • • •

THE millionaires on my list are not different from the nonrich or downright poor in character, however, and the feeling against them is due solely to the fact that they got rich. If they were still poor nobody would think much about them one way or another.

True, some of our rich men have been terribly brutal toward people of their own native kind, which is to say the poor, who worked for them helping them to get rich. But these employes were hoping to get rich themselves, and they did not make millionaires of their bosses because they wanted to. The small employer is just as likely to grind his help to make a dollar for himself, and there is never any lack of foremen, floorwalkers, spotters, inspectors and petty executives in the poor brackets to drive and harass other people in the hope of struggling up to wealth themselves.

One man on my list of millionaires was a breaker boy or something of the kind in a Pennsylvania coal mine and left home to land in Chicago about 40 years ago with about a dollar's worth of money and no baggage. Chicago was growing, and by working hard and outguessing other people who were trying to outguess him he accumulated a fortune in business. I wasn't there, but I don't doubt that he worked hard, because he is a huge, strong man even along toward 70 and a horse for energy to this day. He never had any time for hanging around saloons or horse parks, and he didn't go to the burlesque shows and he was always saving a dollar by self-denial. It would not surprise me to be told that he trampled a few of his contemporaries on his way to wealth, but it is reasonable to assume that they were trying to trample him.

• • • •

IT may be heresy, but I believe that in most cases the self-made rich man got rich because he was a better man and worked harder. To hedge slightly, I would like to exclude from this generality the luck millionaires, including executives who got rich in the market boom of Mr. Coolidge's reign. It wasn't necessary for them to know much or work hard. They just happened to have a dollar on a million-to-one shot which turned up. Still, even these were not essentially different in character from those who failed.

If there is a poor man in the country at this moment who would refuse to accept the same opportunity to quit being poor and become a millionaire I would be glad to hold his coat while he chucks the first stone at a millionaire.

Summer Theaters

By William Lyon Phelps

SOME are theaters and some are not; but surely the custom of giving plays during the summer months is one of the most notable developments of the modern drama. Only a few years ago it could not have been called a custom; there were only a few instances, and some of them were regarded as freaks.

• • • •

Now I wish that Burns Mantle, the New York drama critic, whose annual volume containing the best plays of the previous year in the legitimate theaters of New York, is so useful, would give his judicial and statistical mind to the consideration of the summer theaters; and publish a list of all the plays given rurally in America during the summer of 1935.

Among those given merely in one week in July, and in a circumscribed area in a few Eastern States, were "Ode to Liberty," "The Pursuit of Happiness," "The Wind and the Rain," "Death Takes a Holiday," "Laburnum Grove," "The Well of the Saints," "Uncle Vanya," "Fly Away Home," "Petticoat Fever," "Calling Zero," "Post Road," "The Bishop Misbehaves," "Mrs. Moonlight," "The Truth About Blayds," "The Silver Box," "Goodbye Again," "The Beaux Strategem," "Doctor Knock," "The Enemy;" and among the players were Frances Starr, Glenn Anders, Fay Bainter, Tom Powers, Ina Claire, Winifred Lenihan, Earle Larimore, Ethel Barrymore; a remarkable roll call.

• • • •

It is a good thing that not only individuals can take a vacation and leave the city for the country or for small villages; but that art itself can go and live in the country for awhile. It is a fallacy to suppose that the human mind must be as dormant in the summer as the body of some animals is in the winter.

Besides the familiar and standard plays mentioned in the above list, 11 new ones were given in various barns and garages during one week in July. They certainly did not open cold.

Jimmy Comes Back

New York Correspondent Paints Picture Of Scene As Gotham's One-Time Mayor Lands From The Proud Queen Mary, Dragging The Hide Of The Internal Revenue Department Behind Him.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THE whole city was throbbing with anticipation as the great day dawned. There was a cheerful holiday air throughout the metropolis. The schools had been dismissed and the school children, carrying miniature American flags and little tin boxes, had begun to gather early on the streets around the City Hall. Lower Broadway was a mass of color, with British and American flags snapping in the breeze of one of those clear, sparkling days for which New York is famous. Everyone turned a happy face to his neighbor and the only note of doubt to mar the occasion was a random question here and there, springing from past memories, of "Has he missed the boat again?" For the civic hero, the idol of Broadway and the prince of good fellows, was due to come back.

Platoons of police began to wheel into City Hall Plaza, some wearing the regulation coat and some in their light blue summer shirts. As the serried ranks massed into formation there was a snappy evolution, practiced for weeks before, and suddenly the shirted patrolmen spelled out in giant light blue letters against the dark blue background of their fellows the magic words "Welcome, Jimmy!" The crowd knew instinctively that no reference to burglars' tools was intended and cheered madly.

Shortly afterward a contingent of United States soldiers from Governors Island, led by a military band playing "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes," marched briskly into the square and fired a salute of 21 cartridges, which was considered a nice compromise between a national honor and an informal demonstration. They were soon joined by regiment after regiment of the National Guard, every regiment headed by a band throbbing out "Will You Love Me in December As Lou Did in May." So intoxicated were the guardsmen by the lilt and significance of the ditty that they were almost waltzing.

• • • •

SCARCELY noticed by the happy throngs were a sullen group in the southwest corner of the plaza. These abdurate men persistently kept their hats on, possibly as a subtle insult to the spirit of the whole affair or possibly merely to shield their scowling faces. They did not join in the cheers, but muttered to themselves. They were United States income tax collectors. And they were still muttering to themselves when a hearse drew up in their midst bearing the mortal remains of the Hon. Samuel Seabury.

But no one paid the slightest attention to that mournful interlude, for two figures had appeared on City Hall steps. One of them was short and stocky Mayor LaGuardia himself. The other was tall, graceful, debonair and resplendent in striped trousers, immaculate cutaway and shining silk topper. On his lapel he wore a single, perfect gardenia. It was Grover Whalen, drafted back for the occasion into his old job of Official Greeter.

"I just can't hardly wait," said the Mayor, wringing Mr. Whalen's gloved hand. "Suppose the Macom should sink?" "But it will not sink, Mr. Mayor," replied Mr. Whalen, reassuringly. "Bearing such precious freight, it could not sink." At that the Mayor drew Mr. Whalen impulsively toward him, and gently downward, kissing him resoundingly on both bronzed cheeks. Of course, it was one of those bursts of Latin temperament for which Mr. LaGuardina is now and then distinguished. But Mr. Whalen looked so wonderful that the Mayor just couldn't help it. And the crowd, at an emotional pitch itself, understood and forgave.

• • • •

THE scene changes. The tug Macom, official barge of welcome for the City of New York, is chugging down the bay, with Grover Whalen and his gardenia fixed firmly in the prow. Before them looms a gigantic ship which, to coin a phrase, is the cynosure of all eyes.

It is the new liner, the Queen Mary, latest and largest jewel in that necklace of the British merchant marine on which the sun never sets. It is the maiden voyage of the great ship, just off the ways, and she looks every inch the sovereign of the seas. And, all told, she contained a great many inches.

The Queen, so to speak, is without her hat, which gives her a reckless, almost a rakish air. Everyone on the boat, indeed is hatless, with the exception of that dapper figure on the bridge, who wears a beret. There are no passengers, with the exception of the figure on the bridge,. As a matter of is drawn up on deck, breathless with expectation. The bereted figure on the bridge, however has, as usual, a breath. As a matter of fact, the maiden voyage of the Queen Mary centers entirely on him. For no sooner was it known in London that he desired to return to America than a grateful British public rose en masse, chartered the giant liner, and sent him on his way.

LET us skip the official greetings of Grover Whalen and his gardenia. Let us skip the nasty crack of a member of the crew of the Macom, who, glancing at the headger of the returning hero, remarked, "Well, I see Jimmy's still got his berets." Let us skip the scene of debarkation at the Battery, only matched in history by the landing of Columbus on San Salvador or the Pilgrims' leap to Plymouth Rock. Let us skip the mad scenes on Broadway as the welcoming automobiles slowly rolled up the Canyon of Big Business—the bewildering whirl of ticker tape, the torn telephone books fluttering downward and the contents of thousands of tin boxes, many now, alas, empty, floating on the agitated air. Let us skip the raucous shouts of the millions, the shrill feminine shrieks of "Ah, there, Jimmy!" As we said before, let us skip all this and repair to the aldermanic chamber of the City Hall.

"Jimmy, you are here!" the Mayor is saying. "Jimmy Walker, the freedom of the city is yours. Unfortunately, there is very little left. Nevertheless, we are glad to concur in the Scotch verdict at our distinguished Government—not proven. As far as we are concerned, Jimmy, they haven't got a thing on you. And once Mayor of this city, always Mayor, is what I say. And I mean that from the bottom of my heart, as I shall endeavor to demonstrate at the next election. I take it from your appearance that there are still tailors in London and I want to tell you that many a warm heart beats beneath the ragged coat of America. The President of the United States meant to grace this occasion, but is unavoidably detained at the moment, controlling potatoes. He asks me to give you, his old buddy, his warmest personal regards. And now, ladies and gentlemen, politicians, all of you—I call on you to join me in three rousing cheers for Jimmy Walker, the boy who came back."

• • • •

THIS, gentle reader, is offered as an entirely apocryphal account of the return to New York of former Mayor James J. Walker, which, the Internal Revenue Bureau having lain down and rolled over, is scheduled for the near future. We still think it is apocryphal in spite of the prediction of Tammany Leader James J. Dooling that Jimmy can be reelected without turning a handspring. Vindication, like pracrastination, is sometimes the thief of time. And it seems a long time since Jimmy was Mayor.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Fortitude and Ellen Glasgow.

WOMAN is the brave sex, say those who are wise in such matters. Man makes more noise, he rushes forth rashly with banners flying, and then he comes back afraid of his enemies (those personal projections) and, always, of himself. Woman keeps her courage where it is most needed and hardest to wield, at home.

Ellen Glasgow, then, has written a woman's book, endowed it with woman's close interest in facet and minutia, and filled it with woman's peculiar and basic valor. I hope you see with what admiration I regard her latest novel, "Vein of Iron" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50), and, also, being a man, with what awe. This the stuff of our mothers and wives, and where we, with our intellectual toying, cry out for systems, plans, shibboleths and whatnot in the face of a fairly chaotic world, they and Miss Glasgow give only the old counsel: "Be brave." They are right as rain and crops and child birth—and man, bless his heart, has always tried to improve upon each.

• • • •

"VEIN OF IRON"—the vein, needless to say, is courage—tells of three generations of the Fincastle family, Scotch-Irish to their granite bone, who with many pioneering waystops have arived in the Valley of Virginia. An ancestress had been captured by the Shawnees, and in the years with her family afterward she made no mention of her experience. A love of books, not always orthodoxly Presbyterian, had come down the line side by side with such fortitude. When we arrive at Grandmother Fincastle, the first generation of our story, we find already embodied those traits of stubborn independence, self-respect, and hard-bitten but kindly stance in life which, with our best regard, we call "pioneer."

And so, slowly but with the most careful, the most womanly attention to one after another of the dramatis personae, we come to see how these strains are operative in people who draw more and more close to ourselves in time and emotional locus.

Grandmother Fincastle's son, John, chooses to give up his ministry when he finds more truth in metaphysics than in the God of the Kirk. John's wife, Mary, with another sort of courage, stands by him with deeper resoluteness than one might expect from a frail and pretty Tidewater girl. Their daughter, Ada—now we are in our time—grows up to lose her lover to the local siren, and then, after the war, to recover him in the hardness and bitterness which he brings back with him.

• • • •

BUT note—in each of these ostensible trials, failures, pathetic human cul-de-sacs, Miss Glasgow finds something else, something reassuring and enduring. More, she makes it persuasive to the reader, deeply vivid and compelling to him, that Mary really finds herself happy as the poor wife of a de-frocked minister; that John, struggling toward the dooryard of his old home and dying there, finds "a peace too deep for happiness, too still for ecstasy;" that Ada and her husband, past their green and salad days, are beginning to come upon more than a hint of what Julia Ward Howe meant when she arose to a toast on her eightieth birthday and said: "Life is like a cup of coffee—the sugar is all at the bottom."

Don't mistake me. We have here no praise of mere age, mere fatigue and finality. What these characters gain in the end, what Miss Glasgow must indomitably believe that people gain, is the nobility of a consistent pattern of living when its warp has been whatever happens in life and its woof has been courage.

I din that in because it is the texture of Miss Glasgow's mind and of her work. Look at the motto of her book, from Wordsworth:

"Effort, and expectation, and desire,
And something evermore about to be."

Don't tell me that is "old-fashioned" as a creed—I know. But look about you at the American landscape of novelists, at the notorious fact that they go up and come down like sky rockets, brilliant and brief, and then notice how the tenacity and the faith in creed of Miss Glasgow have made her one of the very few writers who increase steadily in stature and maturity. That is most likely the explanation; it is certainly the fact.

That faith in creed is precisely what Gertrude Stein, in her fine interview with John Hyde Preston, called "passion," the indispensable ingredient. If I have dwelt on it, and made no mention of the wit and warmth and color and tenderness in "Vein of Iron," they are there in plenty for you to enjoy. But the true, refreshing note is that Miss Glasgow has given us a novel which is as necessary, though as "old-fashioned," as the prime virtues. Yes, and as woman.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Post-Labor Day Thoughts.

September? No, it cannot be—
There must be something wrong;
For yesterday was Maytime and
The world was gay with song.
The trees were shooting forth their buds,
The grass was tender green . . .
September is the month, you say?
I dunno what you mean.

But yesterday the robins came
And tulips were in bloom;
The chill was off the morning air,
The winter had gone "boom!";
I planned to plant a lot of things
Upon my small estate;
I even bought a spade and hoe—
Don't tell me it's too late!

September? Why, it's quite absurd . . .
I hear the fifers play;
The vets are marching down the street—
It's Decoration Day;
The fields are full of daffodils,
The apple trees are white,
And don't those circus posters say
It's here tomorrow night?

The children romp in street and park,
The signs read, "Pick No Flowers;"
I buy myself an Easter suit
And fear the April showers.
I read the summer cottage ads—
Vacation's call is heard;
September is around, you think—
Now don't be so absurd!

The trouting season opens soon—
We only need a thaw;
A little while and I will go
In bathing in the raw;
The golf greens will be open soon—
Oh, watch me sink my putts!
What's that? The summer's come and gone?
Now, mister, don't be nuts!

Down to the shipyard I must go
And scrape and paint the boat;
Bock Beer days are here again—
I know it by the goat.
Extensive cruising I must do,
So fetch my yachting hat! . . .
It's now too late for shoving off?—
You can't fool me like that!

"Blossom Time" to Reopen National; Will Rogers Farewell Film to Play Palace

Garbo Feature To Be Followed By 'Steamboat

Popular Demand Produces Switch From Gable Film; Other Late News.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

Such is coincidence. Or perhaps, telepathy.

Monday night, while we were pumping out a few paragraphs about the local legitimate hiatus and Steve Cochran's plans for taking Ethel Barrymore on the road in "The Constant Wife," Mr. Cochran—the same—in New York was pumping out a statement to this desk that he will light up the National Theater on September 23 with a "Blossom Time" revival.

"Have refrained from sending any news about attractions because it is this way one day and that way the next," says the letter, received yesterday. "This is definite, however. After the lecture meetings . . . we open on September 23 with the Shubert's 'Blossom Time' and the week of Sunday, September 29, is Paramount's 'The Crusaders.'

"Jolly times and happy moments. Sincerely, Steve."

September 23 also is the date on which Miss Barrymore opens rehearsals of "The Constant Wife," in which she appeared here last May and which will transport her on a "final coast to coast tour" (quotes from the Cochran letterhead), as reported in this space yesterday.

"Blossom Time," the familiar operetta which has been revived all over the country, is not exactly the answer to a prayer, but at least it's something to get the "legit" season started in, ahem, the Nation's Capital.

"Steamboat Round the Bend," one of the two Will Rogers comedies awaiting release when the numorist crashed to his death with Wiley Post last month, will be shown at the Palace following "Anna Karenina." Instructions to this effect were telegraphed late last night to Carter Barron, Loew's divisional manager, by New York headquarters. "Call of the Wild," starring Clark Gable and Loretta Young, originally was scheduled to succeed the Garbo hit, which will turn in a second week at the Palace. Local Loew's officials said insistence throughout the Nation by filmgoers that they be permitted an earlier view of the Rogers picture probably influenced the producers to abandon previously expressed plans to release the comedian's last two films in the order of regular schedule. "Steamboat Round the Bend" is piling up big grosses wherever shown. This week it is in Baltimore. "In Old Kentucky" is the other Rogers picture.

Variety Club Dinner.

Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Willard Hotel, will be general chairman of the annual dinner of the Variety Club, Chief Barker Rudolph Berger announced yesterday. The affair is scheduled for November 23 at the Willard. Covers will be set for no more than 500.

Simultaneously the Chief Barker disclosed the chairmanships and memberships of the various committees which will assist Somerville. Here they are:

Dinner—Carter Barron, chairman; A. Julian Brylawski, John J. Payette, Harry Hunter, Pete Macias and J. Louis Rome.

Entertainment — Guy Wonders, chairman; Stephen E. Cochran; Gene Ford, A. E. Lichtman, Harry Lohmeyer and Nate Stiefel.

Advertising and printing—Harold Weinburger, chairman; Nat Glasser, Osgood Roberts and Harry Brown.

Reception—Charles Kranz, chairman; J. W. Cleveland, Robert Folliard, Edward Heiber, Hunter Parry, Dr. Frank Shyne and W. E. S. Wilcox.

Publicity—Lou Brown, chairman; Arthur DeTitta, Arthur Godfrey and Norman W. Pyle.

Decorations—Sam Wheeler, chairman; William C. Ewing and Edward Haley.

Nat B. Browne will be in charge of reservations and seating, hotels and transportation will be handled by James B. Fitzgerald, Sam Galanty is to be the mogul of finances and Joseph B. Morgan is in charge of tickets.

Richmond vs. Paris.

The Associated Press learns that Claudette Lily Chauchion obtained a divorce from Norman Hoeffer in Juarez, Mexico, on August 22. Salvador Franco Urias made the disclosure only yesterday, when he discovered that it was he who handled the case, according to the Associated Press dispatch.

Senor Urias is an attorney of Juarez and El Paso, Tex. Who are Norman Hoeffer and Claudette Lily Chauchion? you ask. Well, he's that young blade from Richmond, Ind., and she is the Parisienne with misbehaving eyes. Still no savvy? Then perhaps you know them as Claudette Colbert and Norman Foster.

Last week it was announced that Miss Colbert's suit for divorce, on grounds of incompatibility, had been won but not until now is it revealed that it was filed in Juarez. Isn't that something?

Gene Ford, vacationing manager of Loew's Fox, has been an accessory to Sally Rand's interpretation of Sadie Thompson in "Rain" just as the Star's Mr. Melcher was last week. The former, in his postcard from Skowhegan, Me., says: "Saw Sally Rand play Eagels part in 'Rain' tonight. They'll never find another Rev. Davidson after this. Regards." Aren't there more Sally Rand fans, though!

Opening the Earle.

Last night we rectified a previous defection by viewing the Roxyettes' opening number, the thrilling acrobatics of Park and Gifford and Mitzi Kay (who is accompanied by a fair voice), all of whom we were compelled to forego at the Earle's Friday opening because time was too scarce.

If it is not too late, then, we beg to submit that the stage show gets better as it goes along. While Park and Gifford achieve perfection, or the next thing to it, in their particular field of acrobatics, the Roxyettes slay no one with the sailor routine, and Miss Kay, whom Johnny Perkins claims as a "discovery," shows no special promise for big time vaudeville, competition being what it is.

The clowning of Johnny himself, when he commandeers Freddie Clark's baton and leads the orchestra for a spell, is probably the most entertaining portion of the bill until the Hartmans come along with their dance satirizations.

The Earle remits a reminder that "Romance of the West," a two-reeler in Technicolor which augments the principal screen attraction, "We're in the Money," is good. Of course it is good. With those marvelous shots of Grand Canyon, Mirror Lake and the waterfalls of Yosemite, how could it be otherwise, even if the subject is weighed down with a "plot" that is the last word in nothing at all?

Hodgepodge Dept.

Looking forward to next week's stage and screen attractions at the Earle and Loew's Fox, we find that:

Players in "Dante's Inferno" really passed through flame so you could see them going through purgatory . . . Ted Weems organized a kid band and equipped it with mouth organs, broken combs and home-made drums . . . the effect was achieved by creating low-temperature flames and coating the clothes of the players with a special fire-resistant compound . . . so Ted entered the Towne Scientific School of the University of Pennsylvania and became the director of the varsity band . . . "as children," said Wesley Ruggles, "we are all actors" . . . and Art Jarrett prefers that his wife, Eleanor Holm, be accepted as an actress rather than as a champion swimmer . . . "The everlasting children, the actors, are the ones who go on the stage to continue with their play-acting."

Just try to unscramble it. As clews, the "Dante's Inferno" and Art Jarrett and his orchestra, with Eleanor Holm, come into Loew's Fox Friday and "Accent on Youth," directed by Wesley Ruggles, and Ted Weems' band will tenant the Earle for a week beginning on the same day.

Mr. Moore Optimistic.

Becoming more proud daily over the "Wide Range" sound system being installed in the Rialto Theater, Tom Moore is rushing preparations for the opening of "Harmony Lane" next Monday.

"I am confident that business conditions are going to continue to improve and that the outlay we have incurred will be justified," he says optimistically.

The picture, heralded as the world premiere of a picture inspired by the life of Stephen Foster (Douglas Montgomery takes the role of the famous American composer), will be previewed in the Rialto on Saturday night.

People With "Patience."

The redoubtable Bess Davis Schreiner, hiding behind the usual "BDS," puts forth the boast that the principals in "Patience," which the Community Players will offer in the Sylvan Theater next Monday night, are steeped in Gilbert and Sullivan background.

Mrs. Anne Yago McGuffey, who not only takes the contralto role of Lady Jane, but also directs, has sung in all G. & S. operas with leading companies throughout the East, Bess would have you know. Furthermore, she has sung grand opera in St. Louis during outdoor summer seasons and has been guest soloist many times on Marine Band programs in the Washington Monument Grounds.

Jeanette Bittner, soprano, cast in the title role, sang Josephine, the Captain's Daughter, in "H M S Pinafore" in Central High School auditorium not so long ago.

Alma Fivaz, contralto, was Dame Carruthers in "Yoemen of the Guard," given here three years ago by the Washington Civic Opera Company.

Christine Irish has sung in "Pinafore," "The Mikado" and other operas by Gilbert and Sullivan.

Possessing similar experience, gained here or elsewhere, are J. Edmond Veitch, Don Bloch, Elliott Button, Granville Leef, Richard Midgley and Kent Dyer.

Next Hosts at the Earle

The coy miss is Sylvia Sidney and the object of her attention is Herbert Marshall. Together, they are the central attraction of "Accent on Youth," the Earle's next screen feature, which is based on Samuel Raphaelson's comedy hit of last season. Recognize Mr. Marshall in spectacles?

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Sept. 4.

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW was concerned only about one thing when he was making "Anna Karenina." He wanted to lift Greta Garbo, he waited for the opportunity. On the set one afternoon he grabbed Garbo, but she was too heavy for him. He couldn't get her off her feet.

He knows his lines when he comes on the set to act. He studies and memorizes them the night before. He reads the scenario with his aunt, Cissie, who guides his career. Together they rehearse the necessary roles.

Then the next morning, after getting dressed, he reads over the lines he is to say on the set. "I'm not thinking of anything else at the time," says Freddie, "and it's this reading that really helps me."

He is a child actor who is aware that he is acting. He is not merely given instructions. He is also given explanations.

He was groomed to be a performer. At the age of 3, he was taken to his aunt, Myllicent Bartholomew. When he was 3½, he appeared at charity shows and, coached by auntie, he recited a poem about a London policeman and sang the ditty, "Ain't She Sweet."

He has been performing since. He appeared in several London plays, doing bits. He also acted in several English-produced flickers. He was not known, however, until he acted in "David Copperfield."

He was born in London on March 28, 1924. "I'd like Monday for a birthday," he says. He has put on weight and height since he came to this country. He has hazel eyes and brown hair, and is very ticklish.

• • • •

He speaks with a soft voice, British accent. He seems gentle, and he is polite. But in any accent—boys will be boys. One of his tricks is to pull wallpaper off walls. Another is to carve his initials on furniture.

He will visit a house and scratch his initials on a piano. It is difficult for Cissie to deny Freddie did it. They are trying to train him to carve pictures instead of his initials.

Until he arrived in Hollywood, he hadn't seen any flickers. Now he attends them often. His favorite actors are Noel Coward, Charles Laughton and Leslie Howard. He prefers good-looking actresses. "The Informer" is one of his favorite pictures. He is extremely fond of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

He rides a horse well, plays tennis, swims, and has great fun on his bicycle, which has a loud siren on it. He is now carrying a large toy gun with him. He will always tell you the price of his toys.

His companion, besides Cissie, is an English scenario writer, Rowland Leigh. They go to theaters, restaurants and shooting galleries together.

He hasn't a varied taste for food. His menu consists of two poached eggs on buttered toast and tea for breakfast. For lunch or dinner he will have roast beef, new green peas, Yorkshire pudding, cherries and iced tea. He seldom orders anything else.

He doesn't care to take a bath, preferring a shower. A shower is quicker and he doesn't have to use any soap.

The main thing which amazed him when he arrived in America was seeing policemen with guns. "In London," he said, "the policemen don't have guns. The word of the law is supposed to be enough."

He is generally dressed up and appears very neat. He doesn't care for clothes and pays practically no attention to them. He likes to run about in a bathing suit.

• • • •

HE reads plenty and enjoys himself when he has a good book. His favorite authors are Charles Dickens, Mark Twain and W. W. Jacobs. Since he has been in America he has discovered the novels of Zane Grey, who is now one of his favorites. His ambition is not to be an actor. He wants to be an author.

He is given a daily allowance of a nickel. It usually goes for chewing gum or some chocolate. When he wants to go on a spree he gets a week's allowance in advance.

• • • •

It takes him half an hour to fall asleep when he goes to bed. He sleeps alone. A pair of pajamas is always put out and placed on the bed. He never puts them on.

He is very untidy. He lets his clothes fall wherever he is undressing. He will never put anything away. One day he was told to fold his pajamas and place them in the drawer before leaving the house. Instead, the pajamas were left on the floor with this note: "Sorry, darling, no time to fold them."

He is always asking when he will be able to shave himself.

Defense Road's Layout Blamed For Fatalities

Auto Association Cites Slippery Surface and Curves in High Toll.

Treacherous curves, slippery surfacing and faulty road construction in general was blamed yesterday by the American Automobile Association for the mounting death, injury and accident toll on Defense Highway.

Following a special accident survey, the auto club reported that construction of the highway was responsible for all fatalities thus far this year and for nearly 60 per cent of the crash injuries.

"While the driver is at least partly responsible in nearly every accident," the report read, "accident records show that the greater part of the blame for the tragic state of affairs on Defense Highway must be laid to construction. In many places, this highway becomes abnormally slippery when wet and skidding on the wet surface caused all of the fatalities and 57 per cent of the injuries on the highway this year.

"In addition," the report continued, "narrowness of the road was a contributing factor in a number of accidents—such as intersection crashes and failure to keep to the right side of the road. In only a few accidents did the highway factor fail to enter and the majority of these involved pedestrians."

The association urged adoption of immediate measures to remedy the situation. First, to reduce hazards by providing non-skid surfaces at principal danger points and improving the road shoulders, and, second, to widen and straighten the road in order to eliminate many death traps.

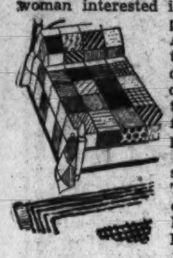
Quilts and Rugs Made by Hand Available Here

Patterns of Grandmother's Day Offered by Lady From West Virginia.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S a charm to handmade quilts and rugs that few beauty lovers can resist. Many a woman interested in adding every possible early American touch to her home has driven hundreds of miles down in the country to find models to please her fancy.



This season she is lucky. The country comes to her. A lovely little old lady from "down in West Virginia" has come to Washington and brought with her many of her beautiful handmade quilts and rugs which she is eager to dispose of. The patterns she used in making these are identical to those patterns used by her grandmother and great-grandmother over a long period of years. Doubtless they were handed down in the family from many generations back.

You'll find this display of quilts and rugs extremely interesting. Do call and find out where!

Tailored Gold Jewelry.

SINCE elegance is to be a by-word of fashion this season, then stake out claims on your share of it with the new tailored gold jewelry displayed in a local store.

The bright gold color will be charming with any color dress—black, blue, green or rust. And the styles of the clips, pins and bracelets are suited to all types of frocks from tailored to formal.

Table of Gift Selections.

THOSE OF YOU planning to do a bit of shopping for a hostess gift, birthday remembrance, or odd bridge prize, will find your time well spent in the gift section of an F street store. There's a large table of suggestions, all with the uniform price of $2.

Among the sundry things displayed there are black, stone book-ends mounted with milky glass birds; table and boudoir lamps in a variety of styles; a five-prong brass candlestick, and a large Russian ware cookie jar, a glory of red, gold and black.

"Dionnettes" for Children.

THE DIONNE quintuplets are firmly intrenched in the hearts of an admiring public and all things concerning them interest the thousands of "Quin fans" all over the country. Just wait till you see their cunning dresses being shown in the children's department of a local store. These are the only authentic Dionne fashions and are by authority of the guardian of the little Dionnettes.

These little frocks come in a wide variety of styles, fabrics and colors. One outstanding dress is in a daintily flowered material made with a quaint full skirt, and tight bodice trimmed with tiny white frills at the neck and sleeves.

You may buy these dresses in toddler sizes, 1, 2, 3, priced at $1.59 and $1.95. They are well worth a special trip downtown to see!

Hose in Costume Colors.

A NEW STYLE note is struck! Betake yourself to the hosiery section of a local store and there you'll see the dazzling display of hose in fall costume colors. Blue, rust, henna, and green!

College girls who dote on new effects should really "go for" these striking hose. According to French stylists, the chic Parisians are hailing them enthusiastically.

Hose in these lovely shades cost no more than others.

Scarf Set Enlivens Dress.

Query: I want to liven up a plain black dress with a bit of color. Will you suggest how I might do this? I had thought of putting colored flowers around the neck and fastening the belt with another cluster. I want the dress for street wear. Do you think the flowers will make it too dressy?

Answer: Very probably they would. Why don't you buy one of those smart scarf and belt sets in whatever color you wish (tiney come in all shades) and use this instead. They cost only $1, and can be depended on to do their bit for chic.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

1. Why is Connecticut called the Nutmeg State?
2. Where did the expression "thumbs down" originate?
3. What movie actress was for several years golf champion of her home State?

Check Here.

1. Because in revolutionary days the natives of Connecticut were said to be so shrewd that they sold wooden nutmegs to the Indians as coconuts.
2. From the practice in Roman times of turning thumbs down to indicate that the spectators wished a wounded gladiator to be put to death by the victor.
3. Katharine Hepburn.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Brioche, Baked Belgian Delicacy, Is Frequently Served by Hoovers.

By Pattie Ellicott.

IN CHINA, Persia, London, Palo Alto or the White House there was one article of food frequently served at meals of former President and Mrs. Hoover. That was brioche. This Belgian-French delicacy was a favorite especially with Mrs. Hoover, and her friends always learned to like it, too.

The Hoovers have been noted for gastronomical treats in the meals they offered their guests. The rarest of fruits, mostly Californian, and delicacies of all sorts in season and out of season distinguish their entertainments.

Early in her married life Mrs. Hoover mastered the essentials of home-making and particularly of diet planning. Her households run as if by clockwork and she always has given personal attention to the menus.

While in Washington during her husband's service as Food Administrator, Secretary of Commerce and as President, Mrs. Hoover usually bought her brioche from a bakery here which makes a speciality of this form of bread. Sometimes when there was to be a state dinner at the White House the baker would prepare dozens of the tempting breadstuff.

It was during their stay in Europe before the World War that former President and Mrs. Hoover learned to like brioche. It is a favorite form of bread both in France and Belgium and, when properly prepared, literally "melts in the mouth." The flavor of cheese, delicately blended, is what gives it its appetizing lure.

One-half pound package American cheese, 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1 cup milk and 3 tablespoons melted butter.

Allow the cheese to stand at room temperature until softened. Then force it through a sieve until it is in small particles and smooth. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Stir in cheese until all the particles have been separated. Combine well beaten egg and milk. Add to flour mixture gradually, beating only enough to blend ingredients. Fold in melted butter. Then place in well-greased tins. Bake in moderate over for 26 minutes.

Renaissance Art Show Influences Fashions

Paris (U.P.).—That the Italian Renaissance Art Exhibition, which thrilled all of Paris, had a decided influence upon winter styles is shown clearly by the new collection of Germaine Bailley. The collection is dominated by warm colors, rich materials, long, fitted gowns with full, long sleeves and corded waists.

Outstanding in the collection is an evening model in red Venetian lace with graceful sleeves to the elbow and belted in gold leather. With this is worn an evening coat in red velvet.

Menu Planning Is Handicapped By Cool Spells

Shoppers Should Buy Food Suitable for Stormy or Warm Weather.

By Dorothea Duncan.

LATE summer storms put a crimp into menu planning for the woman who markets for two or three days in advance. Rain and cool weather on shopping day naturally encourages a woman to buy foodstuffs that will appeal to her family when it is raw and chilly out of doors. The next day, however, may be as clear and bright as a bell and summer salads and cold dishes will be in demand again.

It is wise then, when shopping for several days' food supplies, to buy foods that may be served as attractively for clear weather as for stormy weather. Today we suggest several variations in the day's menus. If the day beams forth warm and bright substitute cold cereal for the cooked cereal with raisins suggested for breakfast. Serve shrimp salad for luncheon rather than shrimp newburg. The corned beef hash may be eliminated from the dinner menu and saved for another day. Add another green vegetable to the menu and serve a poached egg surrounded by the fresh vegetables.

BREAKFAST

Honeydew melon
Cooked cereal with raisins and top milk
Crisp bacon Whole wheat muffins
Coffee Milk (for children)

* * * *

LUNCHEON

Shrimp newburg on toast points or shrimp salad
Sliced cucumbers with French dressing
Bread and butter

DINNER

Woman, 103, Credits Wholesome Food

By the United Press.

Memphis, Mich. — According to Mrs. Annie McKnight, who recently celebrated her 103d birthday, wholesome food is the only sure path to longevity.

"In my case I never ate anything but wholesome food when I was young," she says. "I never ate pie or cake until I was quite old."

Mrs. McKnight has never seen a movie, but recently left her home to attend a birthday party in the neighborhood. She dresses herself daily and can do her own housework. On nice days she even insists on working in her garden. She sews and reads without glasses and hears well.

Mrs. McKnight has lived in Memphis for 40 years.

Posture Called First Requisite for 'It' By Joe Brown, D. C. Theatrical Agent

To Attain It, He Advises Dancing, Walking and Bicycling.

By Dudley Harmon.

"IN A WOMAN'S carriage, more than anything else, lies the 'it' which attracts a man."

So says Mr. Joe Brown, Washington theatrical agent, who instructed entrants in the beauty contest held here last week, preliminary to the Atlantic City pageant, on how to hold themselves while parading before the judges. Mr. Brown has spent most of his life in the show business. An authority on what it takes to please the bald-headed row, Mr. Brown places primary importance on a woman's walk and posture.

Most women, especially housewives, Mr. Brown said, are afflicted with what he terms "washwoman stoop." Or, in the case of the working girl, he calls it the "typewriter slump." That is to say, the average woman slouches along with shoulders hunched and chin down, looking defeated by life. When she sits, her spine crumples up like a Murphy bed, and she sprawls helplessly in her chair as though she were settling down for a long winter's nap. The effect, Mr. Brown said, is not attractive.

Poor Posture Vogue Gone.

During the 1920s, the late but not lamented era of the knee-length skirt and the hip flask, it was considered smart to cultivate the sagging shoulder and the curving spinal column. But the vogue of poor posture, according to Mr. Brown, has gone the way of the flapper and the sheik, and smart women today are adopting the healthy, youthful stride with chin up and shoulders back.

What are the qualifications for good posture?

"The most important thing," Mr. Brown said, "is to stand erect. The chin should be up and the stomach in. Don't overdo it, however, and become as stiff as a ramrod. A natural posture is the most attractive. Nature didn't mean for us to stand straight as a board anymore than she meant us to slump. She intended us to stand and walk easily, with shoulders back and head up.

"The walk is just as important to a woman's charm as her posture. It should be easy and graceful with toes pointing straight ahead, not spread out duck fashion, as so many women hold them. The ball of the foot should come down before the heel, and the steps should be neither too long nor too short, but of medium length.

Stooping Emphasizes Height.

"Short girls, in an effort to seem taller, frequently take such enormous steps as to appear ridiculous. Tall girls, on the other hand, trying to appear shorter, often mince along with absurdly tiny steps. Short girls should take steps in proportion to their size, while taller ones require a longer stride."

Post Staff Photos.

Posture that will make any girl a wallflower is demonstrated below by Miss Ethel Zepp. At right she shows the carriage that makes men sit up and take notice.

The tall girl who stoops in order to appear shorter is laboring under an unfortunate illusion, according to Mr. Brown. Stooping only makes her conspicuous, and calls attention to her height more than if she held herself erect. "Besides," he said, "height is something to be proud of, not a feature to conceal. Men love tall, slender girls, provided they are graceful and hold themselves well."

Mr. Brown had a great deal to say on the art of bidding good-by to an escort or an acquaintance encountered on the street. Women should say good-by while face to face with the other person, he said, and then walk away without more ado, instead of calling last-minute remarks over their shoulder as they lurch clumsily through the door or down the street.

Dancing Helps Posture.

It isn't her golden locks or baby stare which make the chorus girl attractve to men as much as it is her graceful carriage, according to Mr. Brown, who beleves that show girls and models have better posture than other women. Dancing, he said, whether of the tap or ball-room variety, helps more than anything else in acquiring good posture.

Other roads to a good carriage, Mr. Brown said, are walking, bicycling and horseback riding.

If you don't ride horseback or bicycles, or get much opportunity to walk, here are some exercises which Mr. Brown recommends for better posture:

For Desk Chair Spread.

Sit flat on the floor, with legs out in front and hands back. Move thus across the floor with a hitching motion. Cross the floor this way eight or ten times a day, and the excess flesh will disappear.

For Sagging Shoulders.

Stand erect with elbows bent and arms close to the body. Extend arms to the sde, back to shoulder, out front and back to shoulder again, for about 10 minutes a day.

Cleft Palate Or Lip Need Early Surgery

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

NATURE is wonderful but not perfect, and we see some of her mistakes in plants, animals, and human beings. Whenever deformities exist at birth we say that the fault is congenital, and biologists recognize a deficiency somewhere in the development of the embryo.

Some few children are born with deformities of the face, and the most common of these is a cleft lip and a cleft palate. By a cleft we mean a fissure or gap. If the upper lip does not form properly in the developing embryo a space may extend from the side of the nostril to the lower border of the upper lip. This deformity is know as harelip, from the supposed resemblance to the mouth of a hare. When the palate is cleft the failure to close properly involves the roof of the mouth (palate).

Whatever causes the accident occurs early in the development of the child, as the union between the structures that form the two sides of the upper portion of the face occurs by the eighth week of fetal life. The palate comes together by the tenth week. The reason for nonunion of these parts is not fully understood, but there is a marked hereditary tendency. In 1,000 cases reported by Warren B. Davis there were records of family deformites in over 54 per cent. Not only were numerous cases of harelip shown in the family trees, but also certain other types of malformations.

The condition is often attributed by parents to impressions made on the mother, such as fright, a tooth extraction, or the sight of a deformed child. None of these factors deserves the slightest consideration. In every instance that has been traced, the fright occured long after the tenth week, or after the damage had been done.

A child born with a cleft palate is unable to nurse satisfactorily. It is highly desirable, therefore, to withdraw the mother's milk and feed the infant with a Breck feeder, a teaspoon, or a medicine dropper. Occasionally a bottle with a large nipple will prove serviceable.

If a cleft exists in the palate or lip, or both, there is no cure other than that offered by skilled surgery. Certain specialists have become strikingly adept in performing the necessary operations. Unless the child is weak the work should be done some time between the ages of six weeks and three months. Every precaution must be taken to see that the child is in the best possible physical condition. Occasionally blood transfusions will be required with infants who, because of insufficient feeding, are in consequence poor surgical risks. No child who is steadily losing weight should be subjected to any operative procedure except in a dire emergency.

Family Parley Urged to Decide Radio Question

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

There was a continuous battle going on in the family about the use of the radio. Mother was high-brow and very selective in her tastes. She wanted only occasional concerts, and generally string quartets. Father liked a good opera every now and then and once in a while an orchestra, but his real preference was for current event and prize fights. Tommy, who was 14, liked prize fights and baseball games; and 8-year-old Mary was all for bed-time stories and children's adventures. There was only one radio, programs overlapped and interfered, and no one wanted to hear the other fellow's choice.

Nearly every family which owns a radio faces some such situation. Probably no one feature of home life offers so much occasion for discussion and dissatisfaction. It is hardly fair for the mother to shut down on the youngsters and insist on "Nothing but good music." The father will still tune in on his prize fights, and Tommy can enjoy these. But what about Mary? She has nothing.

If the mother, in her effort to educate her family, makes the restrictions too narrow, she is not going to succeed in improving their taste. One and all they will be so resentful that they will come to dislike the music which she wishes them to love. Chamber music, furthermore, is so abstruse and specialized that only a small portion of the world appreciates it. By forcing it on her children to the exclusion of their favorites, she is actually cultivating in them an active distaste for it.

Some compromise is necessary. A family conclave should be called to settle the matter. Let each member of the family list name and hour of his choice in programs. If, on comparing them, they are found to interfere, each member of the family can make some concessions.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I want to compliment you on your corking reply (if you will excuse the slang) to "Lonely Widow's" letter, printed Monday, September 2. I have often wondered if these widows who write to you think you are conducting a matrimonial bureau. As you pointed out, her description of her personality would make little appeal to men, who, for the most part, are looking for a more cheerful and tolerant type of woman to pal around with.

I believe men of today demand pep, style and attractive personality in their women friends. And it is a mystery to me how anyone can be lonely in Washington, a city so crammed with cultural opportunities. One who is at all resourceful can find oceans of pleasure to fill his time.

* * * *

I came to Washington expecting to stay two weeks and have remained for five years. When I arrived I didn't know a single soul. I didn't bother about getting acquainted at first. I was too busy sight-seeing. To me it seems an inestimable privilege to live here. I love to visit the libraries, especially Congressional Library, where one could spend weeks on end and yet not see all. I am particularly interested in the rare book room. Also, there are the fine are galleries, where I love to spend hours. They are veritable treasure troves to me. I prefer to go to such places alone. I don't want to be bothered with others whose tastes might not coincide with mine and who would detract from my complete enjoyment of the visits. Then, I am a movie fan.

* * * *

Look at the wealth of music we have had this summer, such as to please the most catholic as well as the most fastidious tastes. I certainly considered it a privilege to attend the concerts at the Water Gate and the Sylvan Theater.

In the past five years I have made many asquaintances and a few real friends. I am alone a great deal, particularly of evenings, but I find diversion in reading newspapers and magazines. Believe it or not, I have no time to be lonely, even though I am handicapped by partial deafness. Yet it often seems to me I enjoy myself more than those who have no such handicap. I have learned to take life as it comes, making the best of the bad as well as the good breaks. I think the secret of my sincere enjoyment of life is my intense interest in everything worth while.

* * * *

Like our First Lady, I have a lively curiosity concerning all of life. I enjoyed her article on this subject printed in a recent issue of a weekly magazine. I have a happy disposition and a keen sense of humor. To all who are lonely I would give this advice: Don't be an oyster. Get outside yourself. Though it is raining today, it fails to dampen my spirits, for I enjoy all of nature's moods. Sincerely,

CLAIRE.

Refreshing Document.

DEAR CLAIRE: Thank you for a most refreshing letter. It is pleasant indeed to find in one's rainy morning mail a document radiating so vigorous and cheerful an attitude toward life. "Don't be an oyster" is shrewd advice for "Lonely Widow" and all others like her. Your experience is living proof that the resourceful person need never lack either for friends, acquaintances or cultural diversions in this altogether delightful city.

Sportsy Brim Hats Top Boyish Outfits

Pigskin Trimming Among Most Fetching of the Autumn Ideas.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept 5.—Sportsy are fashion's brimmed hats.

Designed for young clothes with that headed-for-action feeling that's so definitely part of the clothes picture for fall, 1935! There's a dash to them, a lilt and a tilt to them, a casual, fashion-right assurance!

Much interest centers in the shape in the crown, which is often tweaked and manipulated into a square-ish effect (sketch lower right, or into a slightly hilly effect (sketch, top).

Hats that plunge forward concealing part or all of one eye will adorn many of the smartest heads this fall. They've a tendency to go in for squared effects, and be lopped off completely in back, like the hat sketched at the lower left of the picture. A rather militant air about these hats—or perhaps they were inspired by the trim little cap of the French gendarme. They're pretty universally becoming, too, with their clean sweeping lines.

In line with those boyish suits and topcoats, is the pigskin trimming of the hat sketched at the top of the picture, as well as the hat itself. Chances are that the lady wearing it will carry a pigskin bag, and wear pigskin shoes to tie up the whole outfit right smartly.

There's softness and a wearability about felt that makes it the year-round favorite for many women. And this fall is no exception.

Velours are a runner-up. They take a deeper, richer dye than felt. So they're a natural for those glowing Renaissance shades so favored by she-in-the-fashion-know these days.

Medium brims are tops for fall, vast brims being apt to fly off on breezy autumn days. Tiny brims are smart, but not so becoming to many women. So the medium brim wins for fall!

What color for these sportsy hats? Almost everything. Black, of course, and the new Renaissance bright brown. Rust, too, and lots of deep, rich green, glowing wine reds, and bright blues. A merry lot, these brimmed sports hats!

Legion Opens Ocean City Convention

Resolution Calling for Payment of Bonus to Be Offered.

Roy L. Pyle, of Phoenix, Is Favored for Post Of Commander.

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 4.—Undeterred by heavy rains, hundreds of members of the American Legion and allied organizations came here today for the opening of the seventeenth annual convention of the Maryland Department of the Legion.

Formal registration opened at noon and by nightfall approximately 1,000 persons had registered.

Speakers on tonight's program included Alex T. Grier, Salisbury, general convention chairman; Raymond W. Cooke, Baltimore, department chaplain; Mayor W. T. Elliott, Ocean City; Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore; State legion commander, John F. McNulty; Mrs. Leo F. Steindler, of the auxiliary; Busrod Watts, Baltimore, of the 40 and 8 Society; Mrs. Louise Couder, Baltimore, of the 8 and 40 Society, and Benjamin L. Wolsson, of the Sons of the Legion.

Gov. Nice to Speak.

Gov. Nice was scheduled to speak tonight, but was unable to get here today. It is expected that he will speak tomorrow.

As the legionnaires arrived, it became apparent that the attitude of the convention was for adoption of a resolution calling for immediate payment of the bonus. A number of such resolutions adopted by various legion posts throughout the State were submitted to State legion headquarters for presentation to the State meeting.

Other resolutions which appeared sure of adoption included one calling upon the Governor to proclaim September 17 as Constitution day, and another urging greater safety upon the highways.

Other early arrivals were preparing a resolution which could call upon the State Department to publish a monthly magazine.

Three-Cornered Race for Post.

Talk of the three-cornered race for the State commandership also loomed large during pre-convention discussions. Some leaders expressed the belief that Roy L. Pyle, Phoenix, appeared to have the "inside track" today over Charles S. Houck, jr., Walkersville, and Paul M. Higinbotham, Baltimore, his two rivals for the post.

Tomorrow morning's program includes the report of the committee on rules, reports of all department officers, committee chairmen and convention committees. Addresses are scheduled by O'C. Roberts, department commander of the District of Columbia Legion, and Watson B. Miller, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee of the legion.

The annual parade is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, with the annual drum corps contests scheduled to follow the parade. The annual banquet, followed by a ball, will be held tomorrow night.

Akerman to Leave Virginia Faculty

Will Become Supervisor of Demonstration Forest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Sept. 4.—Prof. Alfred Akerman, head of the University of Virginia forestry department for eight years, will leave the faculty this week to take over the supervision of the university's demonstration forest of 3,300 acres in Brunswick County.

The timber tract, which will be used for experimental purposes and student instruction, came into the possession of the university in 1933 as part of the gift of the late Dr. Walter M. Seward, of New York and Virginia, an alumnus of the medical class of 1886. Dr. Seward's bequest amounted to nearly $250,000.

Prof. Akerman will be succeeded on the faculty by Chapin Jones, who became the university's first professor of forestry in 1915. Prof. Jones also was State forester for 15 years, and for several years has been in charge of educational work in the State service.

Mrs. E. Brooke Lee Is Granted Divorce

Montgomery Leader's Wife Takes Three Children.

Final decree of absolute divorce was granted in Rockville yesterday to Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson Lee from E. Brooke Lee, former president of the Maryland House of Delegates, leader of the Democratic Party in Montgomery County and real estate dealer.

The decree was handed down by Judge Charles W. Woodward. Maj. Lee did not contest the suit, which charged desertion.

Custody of her three children, Blair Lee 3d, E. Brooke Lee, jr. and Elizabeth S. Lee, was given to Mrs. Lee. The court was told Maj. and Mrs. Lee had arranged for their support.

Maj. and Mrs. Lee were married in April, 1914, at Upper Marlboro, in Trinity Church. They have lived separately since 1929.

Worcester County Loses Vote Veteran

Snow Hill, Md., Sept. 4 (AP).—Robert Henry Gray, who voted a straight Democratic ticket in 86 consecutive national, State and local elections, is dead.

Gray, 86-year-old retired farmer of West Ocean City, was buried in Evergreen Cemetery near Berlin yesterday. He died late Monday at his home.

His vote was cast in 16 Presidential, 33 congressional, 17 State-wide elections, 30 Worcester County elections and six special elections. Some of them were held simultaneously.

Friends Fear Lewis' Defeat In House Race

Frederick County Backers Think New Deal Support Will Hurt Him.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 4.—Friends of Representative David J. Lewis in this county are voicing fears over the outcome in the Sixth District Congressional fight next year. They are expressing doubt of the outcome if a Republican of average strength is pitted against the present Democratic member of the House.

The locally accepted opinion that the New Deal, of which Lewis has been a consistent supporter, is slipping, and the possible attitude of the old Ritchie organization in the country under former Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner are reasons for the uneasiness.

The county has been an important factor in the three victories he won in 1930, 1932 and 1934. In 1930 Lewis carried the county over the then Representative Frederick N. Zihlman by 861 votes. Two years later, when the Sixth District rolled up for Lewis the greatest majority it had ever given a congressional candidate, Frederick County also shattered its past records to give him a margin of 3,745. Last year, furthermore, when the late Mr. Zihlman came within an ace of regaining his old seat, the Lewis mapority dropped from 15,000 in 1932 to less than 1,000, but Frederick County remained faithful by a majority of 746.

Democratic Plurality 500.

The county's political importance, so far as the congressional district is concerned, is obvious. And that it is a real battleground is evidenced by the fact that with more than 29,000 registered voters on the books, it has an affiliated Democratic plurality of less than 500.

Lewis has little reason for concern over Winebrenner's personal support. The former State official is known to entertain high personal regard for Lewis and for his work in Congress, and has cooperated with Lewis in a number of recent matters of interest here, including the Monocacy Battlefield project and the proposed Washington-to-Gettysburg Memorial Boulevard.

While Lewis' consistent support of the Roosevelt Administration, his stand on the last soldiers' bonus issue and other important matters, have won friends as well as enemies, his friends in the county are fearful of antagonism aroused in certain quarters over disposal of patronage.

Brunswick Is Sore Spot.

The sorest spot is at Brunswick, heaviest Democratic district and one of the largest. Factional troubles there reached fever heat last spring when a new postmaster was to be appointed. Howard Marvin Jones, Ritchie-Winebrenner leader in Brunswick, was a candidate. The anti-Ritchie group backed E. Lynch Gross, who had supported Gov. Harry W. Nice in the 1934 general election. In the September primary, the Jones organization defeated the Gross section down the line. Ritchie carried the district for the gubernatorial nomination over Conley, although the latter was the beneficiary of a heavy "favorite son" tide throughout the entire county. The rest of the Jones-supported candidates received heavy majorities in Brunswick.

When the postoffice fight occurred six months later, the Brunswick district committee indorsed Jones, 27 to 2. Jones received the highest rating although Gross received five points for military service. The State central committee indorsed Gross and Lewis accepted the indorsement after much protest from Brunswick party leaders.

All Sections Of Maryland Rain-Soaked

Forecaster Says Florida Gale, Less Intense, May Hit Baltimore.

Ocean City Prepares to Send Storm Signals to Fishermen.

By the Associated Press.

Rain-coated Marylanders cast eyes at clouded skies yesterday as all sections of the State received rainfall, with the Western Shore getting considerably more than Eastern Shore sections.

Hagerstown and Cumberland each reported that more than 2½ inches of rain had fallen since Sunday night and that showers still were current late yesterday. Baltimore had approximately a half-inch of rain for the 24 hours ended yesterday morning and heavy showers were the order of the day there.

The precipitation was not great enough yesterday, however, to send any of Maryland's larger streams out of their banks. Cumberland reported that there had been a 2-foot rise in the Potomac River there and that tributaries of the river were swollen. An 8-foot rise would be necessary to send the river into the lower sections of the west side of Cumberland, however.

May Feel Hurricane.

In Baltimore, Weatherman John R. Weeks said the Florida hurricane, if it follows its present course, probably will pass over the Baltimore area later in the week. He said the storm would lose much of its intensity before it reaches Maryland, however, and will be nothing to compare with the August, 1933, hurricane which swept in from the ocean.

Salisbury and Cambridge reported intermittent showers during the day, with a light drizzle holding throughout the whole day. Similar weather conditions prevailed at Snow Hill were a "northeast" rain kept up all day. There was little wind, however.

Centreville reported an unofficial barometer reading of 29.7 early this afternoon and the barometer there was falling, indications of stormy weather on the way. There was a drizzle all day.

Ready to Notify Fishermen.

Arrangements were made in Centreville to notify the 400 or more fishing boats in nearby waters immediately in the event storms of severe proportions were expected.

The barometer at Ocean City fell from a 29.92 reading at 4 a. m. yesterday to 29.83 at 3 p. m. There was little wind, however. After a hard rain for two hours during the morning, Ocean City had frequent showers during the day, dampening the hundreds of visitors present for the opening of the State American Legion convention.

Fair Will Open September 24 At Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 4.—Organized in 1808 by authorization of the Maryland General Assembly, the Hagerstown Fair, one of the oldest agricultural fairs in the United States, will be held here the week of September 24, it was announced by directors yesterday. Andrew K. Coffman is president of the fair association.

The fair has been one of the important factors in improvement of agriculture, poultry and fruit, three of Washington County's largest industries.

Last year the fair association obtained from the State racing commission permission to stage a 10-day racing meet in the spring and attempted to revive the old-time agricultural fair in the fall. So successful was this revival here that the fair association made a net profit of $4,000. The harness races will be held again this month.

The first agricultural fair here in 1808 was financed by a lottery, at which $2,000 was raised. The present fair association was chartered in 1854. The present fairgrounds of 80 acres was purchased in 1880 and exhibitions have been held there each year.

University, Va., Sept. 4.—University extension teaching in Virginia for the 1935-1936 session will be conducted by 89 instructors from the faculties of 14 State colleges and universities, Prof. George B. Zehmer, director of the University of Virginia extension division, announced today.

State supported institutions cooperating with the University of Virginia in the program are the teachers colleges at Farmville, Fredericksburg and Harrisonburg; Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the College of William and Mary.

The eight private institutions which will serve the State-wide community classes are Emory and Henry College, Hampden-Sydney College, Lynchburg College, Randolph-Macon College, Roanoke College, Sweet Briar College, Washington and Lee University, and Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

More than 250 courses in 26 fields of study wil be offered during the year. In addition to the formal credit courses, a series of public forums will be sponsored in several of the larger cities.

The University of Virginia maintains local bureaus in Richmond, Petersburg, Roanoke, Lynchburg and Danville. In smaller centers public school officials represent the extension division in organizing classes.

Two Counties Join to Fight 'Death Road'

Elimination of Curves From Defense Highway Is Sought.

Proposals Include New, Shorter Annapolis-to-D. C. Route.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 4.—Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties will mobilize civic forces for an audience before the State Road Commission at 10:30 a. m., Tuesday, to form a definite program for improvement of the Defense Highway, it was learned today.

The delegations are hopeful of a promise from the commission that hazards which have caused the death of 15 persons in the last 16 months will be removed from "Death Highway."

Delegate John S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Mayor Louis N. Phipps of Annapolis, will head their respective groups. The Anne Arundel County delegation will be comprised of Elmer Jackson, governor of the Chesapeake District of the Civitans International; R. Thornton Strange and B. Everett Beavin of the Civitan Club; Mayor Phipps, State Senator Rigely, P. Melvin, David S. Jenkins and F. Marion Lazenby, Rotary Club; William U. McCready, president, and Simmon S. Martin, secretary of the chamber of commerce, and John Bromley, county road engineer.

Proposals before the highways board to alleviate the dangers of travel between Washington and Annapolis are to widen the road to 30 feet and remove dangerous curves, utilize the abandoned roadbed of the defunct W. B. & A. Railroad for a second highway, and another to oil the 5-mile gravel stretch from Annapolis to Davidsonville which connects with a concrete and macadam running from Crain highway into Central and Maryland avenues, Washington.

The last proposal originated when a delegation appeared before the Anne Arundel County Commission requesting that this new road be improved in preference to the Defense highway.

It was argued by Anne Arundel residents the new route would be 5 miles shorter than the Defense highway, that it is comparatively straight on high ground devoid of marshes and cheaper to maintain, and that it has only two bridges, over the Patuxent and South Rivers, as compared to eight on Defense highway.

Hagerstown Feels A Building Boom

$26,560 Permits Issued in August; Jobs Increase.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 4.—A building boom here has put many skilled laborers to work during the last month. Building permits issued in August indicate new construction will continue into the early winter. There were permits for property valued at $26,560 issued last month as against property valued at $6,457 in the corresponding month in 1934 and $7,765 in August 1933.

The new Washington County Hospital building costing approximately $300,000 has been completed and work will be started on remodeling of the old hospital as soon as patients are moved to the new building about September 15. The old building will be remodeled at a cost of approximately $50,000, and will be used for administrative offices, health department headquarters and clinics.

Two other large buildings are in the course of construction here, a large garage building on the National highway by Nolan Motors, Inc., and a large brick building by the Goodyear Tire Co.

Cardinals' Four-Run Rally in Eighth Subdues Braves, 6 to 3

2-Game Lead In Flag Race Is Retained

Berger's 30th Homer of Season Is Wasted for Invaders.

Champions' Late Attack Is Decisive in Series Opener.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 4.—Old Pop Haines failed today in his eleventh try for his 200th major league victory, but his world champion Cardinal teammates rallied behind a relief hurler to pound out a late 6-to-3 triumph over the Boston Braves that kept them two games in front of the second-place New York Giants.

The veteran "knuckle-ball" artist, who has been trying since July 21 to boost his 16-year victory string above the 199 mark, was replaced in the eighth by Bill Walker, after being reached for six hits in the first seven innings.

Wally Berger's thirtieth home run of the season shook Walker momentarily and gave the tailenders a 3-to-2 lead, but the Cardinals mixed some fast base running with four singles and a couple of doubles to push across a winning margin of four runs in their half of the inning.

Manager Frankie Frisch opened with a single off the shins of Ed Brandt, veteran southpaw. After Joe Medwick flied out, "Ripper" Collins scored Frisch with the tying run with a double to left field.

"Spud" Davis followed with another two-bagger off Ben Cantwell, who succeeded Brandt, that brought Collins home with the third run of the inning on Leo Durocher's single. Ernine Orsatti, batting for Walker, popped a single that advanced Durocher to third. The peppery shortstop scored when Burgess Whitehead forced Orsatti at second.

Dizzy Dean went to the hill for the Cardinals in the ninth and retired three Braves in quick order.

Crippled Reds Bow to Giants

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 4.—The Reds, battered almost beyond recognition, managed to cause their usual amount of troubles for the Giants today, but New York still won the opening game of its last Western swing, 6 to 4, to stay in the midst of the hot pennant fight.

Because of a critical injury suffered by Hank Erickson this morning, Ernie Lombardi had to do the catching despite a chipped elbow bone. In the fourth inning Shortstop Gordon Slade was hurt in fielding a grounder by Dick Bartell and had to leave the game. With all these handicaps the Reds still managed to outhit the Giants, 12-11, and only the wildness of their pitchers caused their downfall.

Nats, Browns Idle; Two Games Today

Russell, Newsom to Hurl, Face Walkup, Cain.

The unrelenting rain of yesterday fashioned a double-header for the Nats and Browns today when the teams are scheduled to open their delayed four-game series.

With only 3½ games separating Washington from the last-place St. Louis Club, Manager Rogers Hornsby still clings to the hope that the Browns can lift themselves from the league cellar. Four victories against the Nats in five games in St. Louis last week have inspired the Browns.

Manager Bucky Harris will send Jack Russell and Buck Newsom to the mound in the double bill. They will be opposed by Jim Walkup and Merritt Cain, of the Browns.

Sir Malcolm's Test May Be Safety Aid

Englishman Undecided as to His Future; Praises Utah Course.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 4.—Sir Malcolm Campbell, the only man ever to travel on land at the rate of 5 miles a minute, expressed the hope today that his tests would result in the construction of safer motor cars.

"I do not advocate a speed of 90, 80 or even 70 miles an hour on the public highways," said the nerveless Englishman who yesterday boosted his own land speed record to 301.1292 miles an hour.

"Tests reveal many machines are not safe to drive even 40 miles an hour, yet the owners send them wobbling along at nearly twice that speed. I hope my tests and drives result in perfection of cars to such an extent they will withstand the severest strain in an emergency.

The speedy Briton, looking forward to returning to England with his record-breaking Bluebird racer, has no immediate plans for further speed tests.

May or May Not Quit.

"I may quit the sport and then again I may not," he said. "Only the future can tell. I have not decided whether to rebuild the Bluebird, construct an entire new car, or quit entirely."

Sir Malcolm said reports he already had ordered the construction of another Bluebird, larger and faster, were false.

The little Englishman said his Bluebird performed beautifully at full speed yesterday and that for the first time since he began his daring exploits on the speed straightaways he encountered no slippage. Terming the track "the best in the world," he predicted even greater speeds.

He declined to predict an ultimate "top" in the land speed records, but he expects marks much higher than 300 when tires and other equipment reach a higher state of perfection. He said his tires, especially those on the rear wheels, withstood the terrific centrifugal force and heavy weight wonderfully well and pronounced the information gleaned from the runs as "amazing." A study of the numerous instruments in the machine was delayed for "time."

Joy of Achievement.

He described his delight at reaching his long-sought goal of 300 miles an hour as the "joy of achievement."

"I have been setting my goal higher and higher for many years," he said, "and each time I have ultimately reached it.

"Sometimes when I get away from the track for several weeks I think I will never drive again," he added somewhat sadly, "but when I return to the garage and see Bluebird, I again become enthused and crave for another attempt at higher records.

"It's like the drinking habit—as you Americans would say, you can't leave it alone," he laughed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 4.—Although they lost their only game over the week-end, the Berkeley outfit retained their lead in the Bi-County Industrial League, but the playing off of the two postponed games will be necessary before the ultimate second-half winner will be established. Galan Clouts 2 as Cubs Win, 8-2

French Checks Phillies as Mate Pounds Out Two Homers.

Chicago Victory Keeps the Team in Pace With Rivals.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—Augie Galan hammered out two home runs, one with the bases full, to support Larry French's steady pitching today and the Cubs brushed past the Phillies, 8 to 2, in their pursuit of the Cardinals and Giants.

French yielded eight hits, the same number his mates made off Orville Jorgens, John Pezzulo and Jim Bivin, but he scattered them well and mixed in eight strikeouts to hang up his thirteenth victory of the season.

Jorgens' wildness in the fourth and Galan's first homer in the sixth gave the Cubs a 3-1 lead. Pezzullo started the eighth but was yanked after filling the bases. French singled in one run and Galan followed with his full-house homer off Bivin. In all, he drove in six runs.

Star Backs' Return Booms W.-L. Stock

Owings, Bailey to Re-enter School This Fall.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 4.—Washington and Lee football stock was pegged upward today with the announcement that Capt. Jack Bailey, full back, and Howard C. "Tubby" Owings, giant tackle, are expected to report for the first practice session tomorrow at Nimrod Hall.

Financial difficulties caused both of these stalwarts to withdraw from school last February, but at the university today it was said they will be eligible for football under Southern Conference and on university rules existing at the time of their resignation.

Only 32 men are expected to don uniforms for the early workouts, but Coach Tex Tilson will have 12 letter men around whom to build an eleven to defend conference and State titles. On the other hand, an even dozen monogram wearers will be lost to the Generals.

Can't Keep Mobs From Umps, Town May Forfeit Franchise

Special Dispatch to The Post.

DANVILLE, Va., Sept. 4.—Mount Airy, N. C., may forfeit its franchise in the Bi-State League next season owing to the inability of the owners to provide guarantee of protection to the umpires.

W. G. Bramham, president of the Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, to whom the matter was reported, informed the owners that the franchise could "not be continued under the present status."

Three weeks ago Umpires Kuykendall and Cibulka were injured in a mob attack by irate fans following a close home-plate decision in a crucial game. Policemen protected the two umpires at the police station for two hours.

J. E. Taylor, president of the league, investigated the matter and reported his findings to Bramham.

Bramham asked for guarantees in future, but the owners said that they could not undertake to provide "ample protection" because of the small size of the town's police force and the fact that there are other police duties which prevent the whole force from attending the baseball games fully mobilized to defend the arbiters.

Several nearby towns, having heard a forfeiture is likely, are angling for the berth if it becomes available.

Army Counting On Air Game This Year

Has Passer in Nazarro, Two Good Ends in Shuler, Preston.

(One of a series of stories on the prospects of major college football teams.)

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Army is going into the air, like an avenging horde of her own fighting planes, to even a fresh score with Navy this fall, and to bomb down as well, if possible, such formidable football arrays as Harvard, Yale, Mississippi State, Pittsburgh and Notre Dame.

Up on the frowning bluffs of the gray plains, they're taking the blankets off a big, limber-armed Brooklyn cadet named Joe Nazarro, who heaves a pigskin as far, and with more accuracy, than most college backs kick. Out on the end of Army's first eleven are two of the best wingmen the Cadets have boasted since Ed King and Pete Kopcsak.

Shuler 194 Pounds.

One is the team captain, Bill Shuler, a mere 194 pounds of speed and drawn from El Monte, Calif. The other is Maurice Preston, so big and rangy he plays tackle too, and he also is a Californian, from Tulare. Each stands 6 feet 2 inches high. Each catches footballs like Rabbit Maranville used to snare pop flies around second base. Each is going to get plenty of opportunity to do the same every frosty Saturday afternoon this fall.

"Shuler was the best end in the country last fall," insists Lieut. Gar Davidson, Army's head coach. "He'll be better this year. Preston needs only a bit more polish to be just as good. Nazarro is the best passer we've had in years. So we're going into the air in earnest."

Lost Climax Runners.

Army lost its two climax runners by graduation, Texas Jack Buckler and Monk Simon, as well as its two top blocking backs, Joe Stancock and Bill Martz, and most of the first string line. But there are reserves enough back for a bigger, faster line than last year's, when Navy beat the Cadets, 3 to 0, for the first time since 1921, and the backs, if not as well known as Buckler and Stancock, are more plentiful.

Because of that, Davidson plans a more versatile running attack to go with his air game. This year Army will run almost exclusively from single wing back formations, unbalancing the line to either side and running as often to the right as to the left. Last year the attack was strictly southpaw.

The schedule: October 5, William and Mary; 12, Gettysburg! 19, Harvard; 26, Yale, at New Haven; November 2, Mississippi State; 9, Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh; 16, Notre Dame, at New York; 23, Vermont; 30, Navy, at Philadelphia.

Gomez Still in Doubt.

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis today reserved decision in the case of Jose Gomez, 22-year-old Mexican player, who is claimed by both the Cincinnati Reds and the Philadelphia Nationals with whom he is now playing.

Kostka a Flop in All-Star Game; Dean Victories Labor Day Psychological Aid to the Cardinals

By Jimmy Powers,
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Florida's hurricane ruined the Giants' old training lawn, finest in the United States . . . Don Budge says he owes everything to Tom Stow, California tennis coach . . . Forest Hills' turf is so soggy service aces stick like rocks thrown into a custard pie! . . . Labor Day victories of Dizzy and Daffy Dean, were psychological stimulants that may carry the Gas House gang charging through September. Averages show Hallahan and Walker have yet to pitch their share of wins . . . Minnesota's man-killer, Stan Kostka, was such a flop in the Chicago all-star game, fans are laughing at '34 football writers who praised him so hysterically. The pros slapped Kostka down like a grammar schooler and Beattie Feathers danced through his zone with impunity . . . Buzz Borries said Columbia tacklers hit harder than Army, Notre Dame or Pitt . . . Jack Doyle-Tommy Loughran fight in Boston is off.

West Point's Gar Davidson is grooming Joey Nazzarro, of Brooklyn, to fill Jack Buckler's space in the headlines . . . Correspondent Jim Morris reports Penn. has reserved 33,000 seats for the Princeton game there, October 5. Tigers are putting in 10,000 temporary seats to care for mobs expected to attend home duels of a schedule that includes Navy, Yale, Rutgers, Cornell, Harvard and Williams . . . Marty McDonough, Colgate's sensational half back, busted his leg last week in a Maine semi-pro ball game . . . Eulace Peacock may play football for Temple. He was All-State half back at Jersey's Union High. Has plenty moxie.

Kutey Kay Stammers is an off-court doubles partner of Greg Mangin. New York's noisest football show will be Huey Long's debut here with Louisiana State vs. Manhattan . . . Umpires flinch from Cleveland assignments where fans have developed bulls-eye pop bottle aim . . . Detroit is so goofey Schoolboy Rowe can't go into the bathroom to shave without being interviewed on how he feels now, etc. . . . Cubs next spring will be the only team to train in both the Atlantic and Pacific districts. They will break camp at Catalina Island and make a long hike to Florida to play the A's . . . Cards last week played an exhibition in Dayton, night game with Cincy the same day, an afternoon game with Cincy the following day and then wound up with a Labor Day Pirate double-header, the first going 16 innings! and our Giants get tired!

Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons had an old-fashioned fanning bee recently, Jack winding up with "You were the hardest so-and-so to plant a right-hand punch on I ever met!" Gibbons was tickled . . . Jimmy Braddock foiled a gabby gal reporter who cornered him in St. Louis and asked embarrassing questions about Max Baer. "Marriage does different things to different people," said Jim, and stopped right there . . . World Series starts in the National League city, October 2. If the Cards win it will be the first big show for Terry Moore, Ed Heusser, Tony Kaufmann and Fidgety Phil Collins. Pie Traynor's winning streak saved his job . . . Looks like a quiet year for the managers. Bucky Harris is the only bloke who may lose his job. Buddy Myer may get it.

Because the Deans on closer acquaintance proved to be regular fellows the Phillies called off their "Bean ball feud" . . . Vernon Kennedy earned his no-hitter through two Cleveland batters "took" ninth-inning third strikes. Anybody want to bet against the Cubs?

Navy to Open Drills Today; 89 Report

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 4.—Members of the Navy football squad who have been on leave since August 15 reported at the Naval Academy today ready to begin the practice grind tomorrow.

The squad, consisting of 89 midshipmen, will report to Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, head coach, tomorrow and will spend the greater part of the afternoon posing for photographers. The real training season will get under way Friday.

Sixty-three members of the squad made the practice cruise to Europe on the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas. They left the cruise ships at Lynnhaven Bay on August 15 and came to the academy, where they went on leave with 26 members of the junior class. There are 22 seniors and 41 sophomores on the squad. The juniors stayed at the academy during the summer.

Plebe Squad Cut.

Lieut. Howard Caldwell, head coach of the plebe team, has cut his squad to about 70 members, and they will be in shape to scrimmage with the varsity early in the practice period. The plebes have been in training since August 14.

Hamilton must build his team from nine lettermen left from last year, a group of last season's substitutes and sophomore players up from last fall's plebe team.

Twenty-two members of the varsity squad graduated in June, including 7 members of the varsity and 13 lettermen. The vacancies to be filled at end, tackle and in the back field. The hardest spots will be the holes left by Fred (Buzz) Borries, jr., Navy's great half back, and William C. Clark, full back and punter.

Dick Pratt and Tommy King, veterans of last year's "iron man" back field, remain.

Hamilton will cut his squad to 44 after about a week of practice. From this "A" squad the varsity will be selected.

Rain Delays Forest Hills Net Play

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 4.—The wheels of the tennis industry made a couple of revolutions today and then were halted abruptly when a drenching downpour washed out the combined men's and women's national singles tennis championships for the third time since the tournament started last Thursday.

This latest postponement—the second in a row—put the men's final over to next Monday. The championship match in the women's tournament will be played Sunday along with the men's semifinals. This schedule, however, is tentative because the weather man forecasts more rain before the week is over.

Two matches were under way before the deluge, which sent 1,000 spectators scurrying to shelter beneath the slanted concrete stadium. In a fourth-round encounter, Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., top-seeded American, won the first two sets, 6—2, 6—0, from Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and was trailing, 2—3, in the third when it poured.

Mrs. King in Lead.

The other match, a third-rounder in the women's tournament, was called after Mrs. Phyllis Mudford King, of England, seeded second among the foreign entrants, had won the first set, 6—3, and was leading 3-0 in the second chapter against Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind.

Play in these matches will be resumed tomorrow or on the next clear day, when an attempt will be made to dispose of today's program of five men's fourth-round matches, three women's third and one-quarter-final and eight third-rounders in the veterans' division.

Allison appeared on his way to a straight set victory over his young Davis Cup teammate before the precipitation broke up the match. The veteran Texan was in his best form of the tournament. He had things all his own way in the first two sets as the result of Mako's rash stroking.

Starting with the fourth game of the first set, Allison won eleven consecutive games and allowed Mako 20 points for that stretch. Games followed service in the third chapter with Allison struggling to hold his delivery in the sixth game, which went to deuce three times and was not completed at the time of postponement.

Louis Confirms Reports Of Romance in Chicago

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sept. 4 (AP). Joe Louis, Negro heavyweight, training here for his fight with Max Baer at New York September 24, came out of his shell long enough to confirm reports he is engaged to marry Marva Trotter, Chicago stenographer.

Chicago reports yesterday said the pair will wed in New York immediately after the Baer fight, but Louis declined to discuss the date, contenting himself with the single statement, "yes, we're engaged."

25 Gridders Practice For Belington Football

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Belington, W. Va., Sept. 4.—Coach Isaac Pitzenberger is putting his gridders through the paces every morning. He will have a capable squad this year. Twenty-five have already reported for practice, among them seven lettermen of last year. The schedule will open Friday, September 14, with Weston at Weston.

Dale Hymes, captain of last year's team, will leave next week for Emory-Henry College, Emory, Va., where he will matriculate.

Brooklyn Second Baseman Marries Nobleman's Widow

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—A romance of the baseball diamond revealed with the marriage today of Lady Dorothy Eaves, youthful widow of a British nobleman, and "Jimmy" Jordan, second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The couple slipped into the Little Church Around the Corner to wed. They were accompanied by a half dozen intimate friends, including Manager Casey Stengel, of the Dodgers.

Before her marriage, the former San Antonio (Tex.) girl smilingly told about her five-month courtship.

"Jimmy and I met at Ebbets Field in May," she said. "We were introduced by Jimmy Bucher, one of his teammates, when I tried to get his autograph.

"After that, I had a box at all Dodgers games. I don't think I missed one of their home games."

They will honeymoon in the South at the close of the baseball season, visiting Jordan's family in Paw Creek, N. C., near Charlotte.

Mrs. Jordan was married at 19. In 1930, she met Lord Hastings of England while the nobleman was flying near Detroit. He crashed and was taken to a hospital. Mrs. Jordan married him there, and ten days later he died.

Tigers Make Ready for Series

New Stands Are Being Added; Park to Seat 47,000 Crowd.

Left Field Seats, Target for Clouters, Only 300 Feet From Plate.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 4.—Manager Cochrane and his Detroit Tigers may not know it, but real world series fever gripped their home field today.

Manager Mike and members of his club, far out in front in the American League pennant race, have shied away from any mention of world series lately because of "jinx" possibilities, as they explained it. So with the Tiger pilot and his squad in Philadelphia, the Detroit front office gave the "Go ahead" signal today.

"Yeah, this is for the series," grinned head groundkeeper Neal Conway, as he directed half a hundred workmen laying 2,000 feet of new sod on the infield, which took some rough usage during a 12-week run of an outdoor theatrical company. From the heights of the press box came the ring of hammers as carpenters reinforced the section which last fall seated more than 500 writers.

Scoreboard Is Moved.

A gigantic derrick towered beyond the left-field wall, lifting sections of the electrically operated scoreboard, which will be moved to right field. Bleachers which will seat 17,500 persons will be built this year, the same as last. This fall the left-field wall will not be torn down—the bleachers will be built over it.

Big Hank Greenberg and other Tiger distance hitters will be interested to know that the distance this fall from home plate to the new bleacher screen will be just 300 feet, several feet less than last year.

The new stands will increase the park's seating capacity to about 47,000. But a crow

Little Nymph Captures Narragansett Feature by Four Lengths

Betters Own Time for Distance

Runs Six Furlongs in 1:11 3-5 as Tinkling Brook Is Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Sept. 4.—Percy Pike's Little Nymph, the lightweight of the field, raced to a four-length victory over Hal Price Headley's Tinkling Brook in the Beavertail Claiming Stakes, 6 furlongs, for 2-year-olds, here today.

A drizzle fell steadily from the third race on but the track was still fast and in accounting for her sixth victory of the year, the Pike juvenile ran the three-quarters in 1:11 3-5, clipping one-fifth of a second from her time for the same distance in her last victory.

Four to one on the board, Little Nymph broke fast with Tinkling Brook and ran even with that filly for one-sixteenth. Then Frankie Mauro took his mount under sharp restraint and Mrs. George W. Ogle's Infidox moved up on the rail after starting slowly. Just past the half-mile pole, Mauro sent Little Nymph charging at Tinkling Brook and pulled away steadily on the outside.

In the stretch run, the slight advantage of weight which Little Nymph enjoyed over Tinkling Brook stood her in good stead, for she ran away to a four-length advantage.

Quits in Stretch.

The Headley horse seemed to lose heart when Mrs. A. Phillips' Jair and Infodix moved up around her, and she was just able to keep her neck in front of Jair, the favorite.

The victory was worth $2,445 to Pike's filly and boosted her earnings for the year to $8,510. The horse paid off at $10.30, $5.30 and $3.50. Tinkling Brook paid $5.50 and $3.30, and Jair, $2.80.

The daily double today paid $183.60, with 93 tickets being sold on The Hare, winner of the first race, and Polly B, winner of the third.

New Oil Supply Needed to Fill Rising Demand

Motor Fuel Consumption Nearing All-Time High Record.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 4.—The interest of business analysts in plans for exploitation of Ethiopia oil fields by an American company has been intensified by recent reports on the prospects of dwindling domestic discoveries of petroleum.

Surveys show the United States has accounted for about two-thirds of the total oil production of the world, but it is estimated that about half of the proven oil reserves of the world are in the United States.

A step-by-step rise in gasoline consumption, and with it the consumption of crude oil, occured from 1925 through 1931. The rate of gasoline use dropped in 1932, but in that year the rate of increase commenced again.

Preliminary estimates showed motor fuel consumption this year should mount to 427,000,000 barrels, an all-time high and some 5 per cent above last year.

This increase has occasioned some concern over the future of production. Standard Statistics Co. in a survey comments:

"Operating conditions over the long-term future will be determined to a large extent by the discovery of large new fields, or the absence of such discoveries.

Depletion in Progress.

"Should only a limited number of new fields be brought in during the next several years, continued rapid depletion of present flush areas would considerably reduce their potential outputs.

"In the absence of important new discoveries, increasing dependence will have to be placed on higher cost crude production to satisfy demand."

Wallace E. Pratt, vice president of the Humble Oil & Refining Co., writing in the current issue of The Lamp, declared: "To maintain the present proven oil reserve, in view of the anticipated future demand, will require the discovery of about 1,000,000,000 barrels of new oil each year over the next decade."

Asserted oil discovery in the United States sooner or later will begin to lag, and then "the American manufacturer of liquid fuels and lubricants will begin to supplement the supply of raw material he has previously obtained from the oil producer in the United States with an increasing proportion of imported crude, provided oil for import be then available."

How fast the United States has been cutting into proven reserves is shown by findings of the petroleum administrative board that from January 1, 1933, to September 1, 1934, there were 600,000,000 barrels of new crude oil reserves proven, but total consumptive demand for the same period was 1,423,083,000 barrels.

Corn Estimate Depresses Price

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Surprise over an authoritative unofficial estimate indicating the 1935 domestic corn crop would be large led to much selling of new crop futures today.

The result was relative weakness of the corn market contrasting with wheat price advances here that reflected upturns of wheat quotations at Liverpool. One leading Chicago crop expert forecast a corn yield of 2,329,000,000 bushels as against the Government's August estimate of 2,272,000,000 bushels.

Corn closed irregular, unchanged to a rise of 2 cents, the latter for September, and old crop delivery, with December 56⅛; wheat firm 1-1⅛ higher, December 90⅞-91; oats ¾-⅞ up, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 20 cents gain.

Reports Indicate Big Wheat Loss.

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Losses of 85,000,000 bushels in the United States spring wheat crop were indicated for the month of August in private reports issued today by Chicago statisticians. The average of the unofficial estimates promised a domestic spring wheat yield of 155,000,000 bushels, compared with August 1 unofficial figures of 190,000,000 bushels and with the Government's August estimate of 176,000,000 bushels.

Bank Stocks Drop $1 to $80 On Yield Slash

Break Follows Highs for This Year Reached Last Month.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 4.—Another wide-open break in New York City bank stocks sent active shares $1 to $80 a share lower today, continuing the trend which began late yesterday when two leading institutions reduced their quarterly dividends.

Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. yielded an additional $4 a share at $101; Bankers Trust dropped $10.50 to $54; Guaranty lost $10 at $279, and First National, the "blue chip" bank stock, declined $80 at $1,650. Others were $1 to $7 lower.

A combination of low earning capacity for money and added costs of operations, due principally to governmental control measures, was believed in well-informed quarters to have been the main reason behind the action of Central Hanover's directors yesterday when they reduced the quarterly dividend from $1.50 to $1. Shortly afterward Bankers Trust directors cut the quarterly payment from 75 cents to 50 cents.

New York City bank stocks in August again reached new 1935 highs, Hoit, Rose & Troster report. From the month's low of 52.62 on August 1, the weighted average of 17 leading issues reached the new 1935 high of 57.35 on August 19. The previous 1935 high of 53.21 had been reached on July 29. However, the list declined in the last half of the month, although the close, 54.98, showed a moderate net gain for the month.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Wed.	Tues.
Advances	381	165
Declines	173	382
Unchanged	175	150
Total issues	729	697

Stocks—Turned about in late dealings and smartly sought higher levels. Earlier in the day prices weakened somewhat. Trader support was credited with the late upturn, as no news of great importance was forthcoming.

Bonds—A brisk rally in the Federal list had a settling effect on the bond market. Federal loans, in favor for the first time in a number of days, scored gains of as much as 20-32ds. Government turnover accounted for nearly one-third of the total volume of $9,366,000.

Curb—A demand for power shares which developed in the final hour steadied prices, which had been drifting lower earlier in the session. The volume rose to approximately 191,000 shares.

Grains—Unofficial but reliable estimates to the effect that the year's corn crop would be larger than the Government estimate led to selling of new corn crop futures. Wheat and oats, were higher.

Cotton—Prices advanced on reports of unfavorable weather in the South. Closings were 7 to 16 points net higher than the previous close with October, at 10.36.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady, at 3.45, with no sales reported. Refined closed at 5.10.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos, No. 4, last at 8¼, and Rio, No. 7, final, at 6½.

Canadian Express Rates Reduced 20%

Montreal, Sept. 4.—Striking reductions in rates on long haul heavy express shipments will become effective over the lines of all railway express companies in Canada on September 2, it is announced by the Express Traffic Association of Canada. The new rates represent a reduction of more than 20 per cent.

Some time ago express rates on packages 15 pounds and under were considerably reduced, but in order to take advantage of these rates, shippers frequently found it necessary to split large shipments into small packages. This entailed an increase in packaging costs which is now removed.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Rally Briskly in Final Hour With Upturn in Government Bond Issues; Corn and Cotton Advance.

By Frank MacMillen.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Sept. 4.—The stock market came about smartly in late dealings today and headed upstream after drifting down idly in early transactions.

Individual issues in a variety of classifications spurted ahead sharply in the final hour to take up their early slack and register gains of fractions to a point or so, while a few gained several points.

News developments were lacking, and most brokerage quarters ascribed the late forward push, which was accompanied by brisk turnover, to the reinstatement of long positions by a number of traders who had wearied of waiting for a post-holiday recession which failed to materialize to any important degree.

Bank stocks attracted considerable attention early in the day in the over-the-counter market where the previous session's weakness was again in evidence, but prices improved substantially from their lows later in most issues. The declaration of a regular dividend by Guaranty Trust Co. appeared to help sentiment toward the group.

Commodities Follow Stocks.

Principal commodities followed the lead of the share market, and the closing tone was buoyant. Wheat futures at Chicago ended 1 to 1½ cents a bushel higher, and corn was unchanged to up 2 cents a bushel. Cotton advanced 35 to 80 cents a bale.

The day's advance in the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was .5 of a point at 48.1. In the stock exchange 1,002,240 shares changed hands, of which about half were traded during the final-hour spurt.

Standard Oil of New Jersey and Socony-Vacuum stocks both felt a little pressure early in the day following the revelation of their connection with the now-canceled Ethiopian oil concession, but by the close both issues were about level with the previous close.

A few issues in the equity market staged excellent gains. Advances of around 2 to 4 points or so were recorded by Chrysler, at 63⅛; Sears, Roebuck, at 56½; U. S. Industrial Alcohol, at 43¾; American Telephone, at 139, and Spiegel-May-Stern at 65⅞. The high-priced gold issue, Homestake Mining, at 398, was up 13 points.

The improvement in most active shares ran from fractions to around a point or so, including U. S. Steel, at 44; Santa Fe, at 50⅛; New York Central, at 23¾; Union Carbide, at 64⅞; Consolidated Gas, at 28, and General Motors, at 43⅜.

On June 7, the company filed an application for the registration of $18,594,000 first lien and unifying mortgage bonds, 3¾ per cent, series of 1935, due 1965.

The net proceeds of the issue are to be used in part to redeem $15,872,000 principal amount of Consumers Power Co. first lien and unifying mortgage gold bonds, series C (5 per cent, due 1952), to be called for redemption on November 1, 1935, at 104, amounting to $16,506,880 and to reimburse the company for expenditures for improvements and additions to its property.

Canada Gets Loan At Record Low Rate

Ottawa, Ontario, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Canadian government has obtained a loan of $20,000,000 for five months from a group of Canadian and New York banks at an interest rate of ¾ of 1 per cent, the lowest ever obtained, it was announced today by Finance Minister Rhodes.

The loan, running from September 1 to February 1, 1936, will be used to redeem 7 per cent debentures of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. due on October 1 currently outstanding in the amount of $23,740,000. The additional funds necessary to effect the redemption will be obtained from other sources, the Minister said.

Andrews to Fight Hupp Management

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—A. M. Andrews, former chairman of the board of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, disclosed today that he was soliciting stockholders for proxies to be voted at the company's annual meeting September 11 in Richmond, Va. He will oppose reelection of the present management.

Recently a number of the directors sent a letter to shareholders asking for proxies, stating that Andrews "will undoubtedly seek at the annual election to prevent the reelection of those directors whose terms of office are about to expire." Andrews, in his letter, said that for 20 years he has been the largest individual stockholder of the Hupp company.

RFC Insurance Of Home Loans Spurs Market

Pending Applications Here Total About $150,000,000.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Setting up of a ready market for long term insured home mortgages by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the favored status accorded such loans by the new bank bill has substantially accelerated interest in this type of security in the last ten days.

Local real estate financial circles yesterday hailed the recent decision of the RFC to materially aid the mortgage market as the greatest step forward since the creation of the Federal Housing Administration.

A recent letter from Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC to Acting Administrator Stewart McDonald of the Federal Housing Administration revealed the establishment of a $10,000,000 revolving fund to create a clearing house for mortgages insured by FHA.

Committments for the purchase of new mortgages from reputable financial institutions will be considered by the RFC mortgage company through any of the corporation's 32 loan agencies throughout the country.

The added support was looked to by officials as speeding the expanding demand for Government insured amortized mortgages. At the present, pending mortgage insurance applications with appraisal fees paid aggregate about $150,000,000. Experience indicates that about 75 per cent of these will ultimately be insured.

The entry of the RFC is expected to broaden the market for insured mortgages by providing discount facilities. Officials said this should stimulate institutional interest by improving their liquidity.

To provde liquidity, the housing act proposed the establishment of national mortgage associations by private capital in cooperation with the Government. But so far not enough private capital has come forward to organize one.

Housing officials have been studying the bank act to determine how far it would go in aiding insured long-term real estate loans and have asked their attorneys for an opinion. On its face, they construe the provision liberalizing real estate loans by national banks as likely to prove of considerable benefit in the restoration of the mortgage market.

A license to operate has been granted the Hotel Greeters Credit Union of the District of Columbia by the superintendent of insurance.

He has been absent during the past year while employed as an analyst in the analytical and technical division of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He resigned a short time ago to return to the brokerage and investment firm.

Evangelist As Premier Faces Financial Poser

Alberta, With an Empty Treasury, Must Raise $15,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Edmonton, Alberta, Sept. 4.—Premier William Aberhart's social credit cabinet, sworn in yesterday, today faced the prospect of raising nearly $15,000,000 in seven months to keep Alberta's credit good.

Aberhart, an evangelist here, formed his new political party less than three years ago. One of its major planks is a $25 monthly credit dividend to every adult citizen of Alberta.

Aberhart's government takes over with a virtually empty treasury. The premier plans to go to Ottawa soon to seek a loan of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. He took office yesterday with his cabinet, facing the prospect of $15,000,000 in obligations coming due before the fiscal year ends next March.

This is exclusive of $18,000,000 already owing to the Dominion and $3,800,000 in demand savings certificates, redemption of which was suspended several days ago by the outgoing administration, after a "run" by depositors.

Before March 31, Aberhart must face bond maturities totaling $5,200,000; interest charges of about $2,800,000 and provincial relief funds of $1,215,000.

In addition, bank loans have been estimated at $5,700,000, bringing the total obligations to $14,915,000.

Utilities Demand Lifts Curb Prices

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 4.—Last hour improvement among utilities and miscellaneous industrials helped the curb market to a steady close today. The late stiffening followed earlier easiness. Volume, which broadened in the final hour, approximated 191,000 shares compared with 179,000 yesterday.

Aluminum Co. of America was a conspicuously firm spot, spurting 4½ points to close at 62. American Gas & Electric rose about a point net, following an early dip.

Other shares finishing steady to fractionally higher included Wright Hargreaves, Lake Shore, Electric Bond & Share, Niagara Hudson Power, American Superpower, International Petroleum and Sunshine Mining.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Alberta to Test A New System Of Currency

Social Credit Scheme, Not Fully Worked Out, Scares Bankers.

By the United Press.

Edmonton, Alta.—Alberta has become the testing ground for the latest in political and economic "share the wealth" experiments.

Promising prosperity "of a kind never before seen in the world," the Social Credit Party was swept into power in last week's election.

Led by William Aberhart, Calgary school teacher and prophetic Bible institute head, the party buried all opposition in an avalanche of votes, winning at least 54 of the province's 63 constituencies.

Although Aberhart's program has never been fully explained, its appeal came from the promise to pay a monthly "basic dividend" of at least $25 to every adult in the province.

Bankers Alarmed.

It was the first time in Canadian history that a socialistic organization has gained control over a provincial government.

Bankers and business men, highly alarmed by the overwhelming victory, met in hurried conferences to determine probable effects of the radical economic program.

Wealthy residents were reported to be withdrawing cash and securities from banks and transferring them to Montreal or Toronto. Terrific repercussions are expected from this flight of the dollar.

The social credit plan is based on the theories of Maj. C. H. Douglas, British economist, and still remains to be "worked out" in detail.

"You elect us," Aberhart told the voters during his campaign, "and we'll get the best experts to work out the Alberta plan."

Maj. Douglas has been named as a possible adviser to the "experts."

The major's theories were rejected at one time by voters in Australia.)

"I expect to start paying at least $25 a month in basic dividends, based on the cultural heritage of civilization, to every adult in the province, with less amounts to minors, within 18 months," Aberhart said in his campaign.

But his followers believe that to be only a beginning. In one of his final campaign appeals, Aberhart boosted the ante.

"I have been doing a little thinking and figuring lately, and I think the figure will be more likely $75 a month instead of $25," he said.

To Abolish Currency.

The plan, if carried out, would cost the province an estimated $450,000,000 a year for the dividends.

Asked where this money would come from, Aberhart said he would levy on the "unearned increment of production" and pay in state credit.

The plan calls for:

1. A levy on unearned increment of all goods imported or produced.

2. Creation of a state credit house and commission of experts to set a just price on everything sold in the province and just salaries for all services rendered.

3. Replacement of all currency with negotiable certificates, to be paid through the state credit house.

4. Payment for all goods and services with the certificates.

5. Payment of all citizens of the "basic dividend" of $25 to $75 a month.

"This plan will banish poverty and bring about a prosperity never before seen in the world," the prophetic school teacher declared.

He plans an immediate campaign to overcome any possible constitutional objections.

Wildness of West Blamed on Horses

Nebraska's Past Is Studied by Government Scientist.

Lincoln, Nebr. (U.P.). — Nebraska once was the home of peaceful, village-dwelling Indians who lived on the products of their agriculture, entirely unlike the red men encountered by early settlers, according to a survey of Nebraska archeology.

The survey was prepared by Dr. William D. Strong, formerly of the archeology department of the University of Nebraska, now with the bureau of American ethnology at Washington.

Dr. Strong's theory of the history of Nebraska Indians, prior to the coming of the white man, is based principally upon his own investigations. He has dug into deserted Indian villages for information about the State's earliest residents from Scottsbluff, in the extreme western part, to the Missouri River.

It was the introduction of horses by the Spaniards, intrepid adventurers from what is now Mexico, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, that made the West "wild," Dr. Strong believes.

Indian tribes whose occupation had been agriculture discovered an easier way of getting food with the use of the horse—by following the buffalo herds, according to Dr. Strong.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

STRANGE as it seems, two pendulum clocks which are running at almost, yet not quite the same speed, can be made to keep the same time simply by placing them close to each other on the same support. Eventually the two pendulums will swing in unison. This is due to the fact that vibrations in the air set up by one pendulum tend to act upon the other until they are swinging a uniform rate.

This will not be true if there is any considerable difference in the rate of the clocks.

A hamlet, according to the dictionary definition, is a small cluster of houses in the country; specifically a small group of houses belonging to a parish or village. But the definition given by old Welsh law had more exacting requirements.

A hamlet was required to have at least nine buildings, a plow, a kiln, a churn, a bull, a cock and a herdsman.

Lost, strayed, or stolen—one king. Reward offered. That, in effect, was the message of notices posted on the walls of Stockholm by Swedish officials when their king, Gustavus IV, left for parts unknown in 1803. Gustavus returned after three years, ruled for another three, and then was deposed by revolting nobles. It is not of record whether the reward for his return ever was paid.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Sympathy for Mexico — By Harry J. Tuthill

My word! There's more of that shimmying motion we had awhile ago.
My poor Mexico. Ah, how I weep because I know you shall never again see the man who made you what you are today.
Listen Dominacker, don't holler that way. My nerves are on edge too.
What a sad hour for my empire. Losing the statesman who made every other nation in the world afraid to even look at Mexico.
Don't worry. We'll land okay... I hope.
Dominacker the Great was a self-made man. Even as a kiddie he thought only of getting higher than anyone else, but he never even dreamed he'd get as high as he is now.
My idea, even at a time like this, is to look at the bright side of....
Poor Mexico! In one week I know my enemies who squeal so much about this liberty fad will stir up an election... and my Mexico will seek another Dominacker the Great. Ha, ha! What a cruel joke.
